ITV chiefs in talks to revamp classic show

THE X BACKTOR

By HANNAH HOPE

ITV chiefs are in talks to bring back telly talent juggernaut The X Factor seven years after it left our screens.

Producers are planning a revamped format with younger judges to attract the social media generation.

The reboot could see ex-head judge Simon Cowell, who co-owns the rights, return in a behind-the-scenes role.

CALL BY TOP LABOUR PEER:

GET BRITAIN BACK INTO WORK, PM

Warning . . . Lord Walker

THE former cost of living czar is urging Andy Burnham to cut business tax to create jobs and growth.

Labour peer Richard Walker says No10 should "stop focusing on the cost of living and start focusing on the cost of getting Britain back to work".

The boss of the Iceland supermarket chain adds in his explosive intervention that the Government shouldn't resort to being "bailout Britain", answering all problems with "another subsidy, benefit or demand on business to pick up the bill".

EXCLUSIVE by KATE FERGUSON, Political Editor

Writing in today's Sun On Sunday, Lord Walker adds ministers must lower the costs on businesses to turn the economy around.

He says this would reduce the benefits bill, tackle the youth unemployment crisis and help struggling Brits.

He warns "warm words towards business won't be enough" and that the PM and Chancellor John Healey must cut business taxes in the Budget in the autumn. Lord Walker writes: "Their first priority should be simple: make it cheaper to employ people, invest and grow."

He spent five months advising the then Prime Minister Sir Keir Starmer on how to help people clobbered by crippling price rises.

Lord Walker is also calling for "brave decisions" on welfare to get people back into work and to reduce the bloated benefits bill.

There are nearly one million people aged between 16 and 24 who aren't in employment, education or training.

The nation's benefits bill – minus pensions – stands at £207billion. The first Budget under Mr Burnham as Prime Minister will be on October 28 and is expected to include tax rises.

A growing number of business chiefs warn that hiking levies further will backfire.

One of Mr Burnham's allies, economist Lord Jim O'Neill, who turned down a job in the new Government, has said it would be "stupid" to increase wealth taxes.

The tax burden is at its highest level since World War Two. Mr Burnham has vowed to be a "pro business PM".

Vote . . . Mr Cleverly

Cleverly to run for Mayor of London

By SOPHIA SLEIGH

SENIOR Tory James Cleverly is quitting as an MP to run for election as Mayor of London.

The Shadow Housing Secretary – who has served as Home Secretary and Foreign Secretary – hopes to replace Labour's Sir Sadiq Khan.

He said the capital needed "protecting" from new PM Andy Burnham.

Mr Cleverly told The Sunday Times: "Burnham is looking to punish London. It's perverse.

"He sees Londoners as a cash cow. Money is being diverted to prop up his political hinterland and buy votes elsewhere."

Sir Sadiq is halfway through his third term but has not confirmed whether he will run again in May 2028.

If he does not, ex-Labour deputy PM David Lammy could be a candidate. A well-placed London Labour source told The Sun on Sunday: "Cleverly is the only one we'd be scared of facing."

Anger at Burnham rail deal

By NICK MIAO

ANDY Burnham has agreed above-inflation pay rises with train drivers to avoid embarrassing strikes on the London to Manchester line.

It is his first public sector pay deal since he set up No10 North in Manchester – where his ministers now routinely have to travel via Avanti West Coast services.

Leaked union correspondence shows the PM signed off a 3.6 per cent deal for Aslef drivers who start on £70,000 a year.

Shadow Transport Secretary Richard Holden accused Labour of capitulating to the unions.

He told The Sunday Times: "Taxpayers are being asked to stump up millions simply to save Burnham's blushes."

This week Mr Burnham will deliver his first Commons statement as PM – vowing to "bring back hope" by reducing the cost of living.

VLAD BLITZ KILLS 37

Strike . . . flames in capital Kyiv

By LAUREN UTTLEY

FIREFIGHTERS watch as a blaze engulfs a warehouse after Russia's deadliest attack on Ukraine this year.

President Volodymyr Zelensky declared a day of mourning after the overnight blitz, which killed 37 people and injured dozens more.

The attack on capital Kyiv was part of a huge coordinated assault by the forces of Vladimir Putin, below, using drones and missiles.

The inferno triggered a series of terrifying secondary explosions, with nearby homes catching fire.

Mr Zelensky warned the number of fatalities could still rise as rescue crews continued working at the scene in the suburb of Bucha.

THE Royal Navy tracked two Russian warships escorting sanctioned boats in the North Sea and Channel for three days last month.

War ruins Iran trade

IRAN'S leaders have admitted US sanctions and a naval blockade have shrunk the nation's foreign trade by a third.

But Tehran vowed yesterday to withstand US pressure and maintain control over the strategic Strait of Hormuz.

Its government said in a statement on state media that addressing economic pressures caused by sanctions and war was a central focus.

Six months after the US and Israel launched attacks, Washington has warned countries to cut business ties with Iran or face secondary sanctions.

IRELAND 'ROW'

GORDON Brown has said there will be a united Ireland – risking a massive Labour Party row.

The former Prime Minister said the island would be united in the long term.

He made the comments despite serving as Chancellor in Tony Blair's government when the Good Friday Agreement was signed in 1998. He said it would be "a long process where people find a way of agreeing".

His comments are likely to spark a row in Labour after PM Andy Burnham ruled out calling a referendum on Irish unification.

£1.5M TO HELP COURTS CLOG

NO10 has pledged £1.5million to fund the training of 100 extra barristers per year to tackle the backlog of 80,000 court cases.

Courts minister Sarah Sackman said the scheme was "open to the brightest from every background".

SHOP FEES FURY

RETAILERS have been hit by a doubling of recycling fees due to a stealth tax.

Large shops and firms have to contribute to costs under the Packaging Recovery Note (PRN) scheme.

Analysis by the British Retail Consortium has found that the average price per tonne for plastic PRNs has doubled from around £180 in 2025 to over £370 this year.

The consortium's director Andrew Opie warned that the industry's total bill will rise by more than £100million in a year and branded the scheme "outdated, inefficient and unnecessary".

IT'S ENDER ROAD FOR STAR No4

Actor Pierre quits after 1yr

By HANNAH HOPE, Showbiz Editor

EASTENDER Pierre Counihan-Moullier is joining the Albert Square exodus.

The 26-year-old proved an instant hit with viewers when he joined the BBC1 soap just a year ago to play the returning character Oscar Branning.

But he has quit and is set to follow Kellie Bright, 50 – who plays Linda Carter – and Ravi Gulati star Aaron Thiara, 33, out of the door later this year.

Meanwhile, 42-year-old Michelle Ryan's character Zoe Slater – who first appeared in 2000 – is set to be killed off in coming weeks only a year after her comeback.

A source said: "Viewers are still reeling from the news they are losing Kellie and Aaron, two incredibly popular staples."

Pierre was signed up by new EastEnders boss Ben Wadey, 32, who joined from Channel 4's Hollyoaks last year.

Pierre will film his final scenes at studios in Elstree, Herts, and the door is expected to be left open for the character.

The source added: "The fans love Pierre, so this is a huge blow to the show. It's also interesting that signing up Pierre has been one of the better things that Ben Wadey has done.

"So the fact that he's leaving is not a good look. Everyone's now hoping that the rest of the cast will sit tight for a while."

Last week we told how Zoe will die in her sleep after banging her head.

An EastEnders spokesman declined to comment.

£9K CON RAP

A COUNCIL worker has been sacked for going on a £9,400 spree with a taxpayer-funded credit card.

Daniel Baldwin, 33, was an accommodation officer for the homeless with Newport City Council when he was given the card for local authority purchases.

But he ran up the debt for parking fines and "non-council-related expenditure" in less than two months.

The spending came to light during an audit.

Baldwin, of Newport, admitted fraud at the city's magistrates' court and was handed a 12-month community order. He has paid back the money in full.

WAVE HORROR

A HOLIDAYMAKER drowned after being "hit by a large wave" during a family trip to the beach, the opening of an inquest was told.

Married Simon Lightbody, 48, was struck while swimming in the sea at Blackpool Sands near Dartmouth, Devon on Monday afternoon last week.

His family raised the alarm after the chartered mechanical engineer disappeared from view.

A lifeboat recovered the body of Mr Lightbody, of Reigate, Surrey. The cause of death was given as drowning. The Exeter hearing was adjourned.

PLAN TO REVIVE

GIVE US

EXCLUSIVE by HANNAH HOPE
Showbiz Editor

THE X Factor is poised for a sensational return to boost ITV's viewing figures — and its bank balance.

Executives are "super-keen" to bring back the world-beating talent show, which pulled in 19 million viewers at its height and turned One Direction, Little Mix and Leona Lewis into global stars.

Production company Talkback Thames and ITV chiefs are in top-level talks on launching a revamped version of the contest.

The plan is to have younger judges to appeal to the social media generation but show creator Simon Cowell, the former head judge, is likely to return in some capacity.

It comes after recent ITV attempts at big-budget entertainment shows, including The Neighbourhood hosted by Graham Norton, and The Fortune Hotel, hosted by Stephen Mangan, flopped disastrously.

Earlier this month ITV's singing competition The Voice returned with just 1.9 million viewers and was beaten by little-known BBC1 game show Picture Slam.

The X Factor ran for 15 series from 2004 to 2018 before two spin-off series aired in 2019 – X Factor: Celebrity and X Factor: The Band.

ITV's Director of Entertainment, Reality & Daytime Katie Rawcliffe is said to want to sprinkle the nailed-on hit's magic on the station's ailing evening weekend offerings.

A source said: "ITV have a giant gaping hole that needs filling in its entertainment schedule, particularly over weekends when bigger viewing figures are up for grabs.

"Katie can't afford another disaster after the car crash of The Neighbourhood, which was colossally expensive and failed terribly.

"Rather than creating more flop formats they have the opportunity to give The X Factor, a sure-fire hit, a modern makeover.

"They can explore a younger, fresher panel, with new faces and have Cowell behind the scenes. The plan is for the show's return to take on a new life and be updated to envelop social media generation.

"ITV has shown with programmes like Love Island and I'm A Celebrity that social media is where they can inject massive viewing figures.

"The X Factor was one of the most iconic shows in TV history and created dozens of stars and household names who are still riding high today.

"Executives at Talkback Thames have had discussions with ITV chiefs about a comeback and they are super-keen for it."

A return would also boost ITV plc's revenues which have been hammered in recent years by weak advertising and overspending on its streaming services, say finance experts Hargreaves Lansdown.

At its peak, The X Factor was one of UK TV's most lucrative entertainment shows, generating an estimated £100million in 2009 alone.

Individual 30-second commercial spots during the finale commanded huge premiums, bringing in from £150,000 to £300,000 per slot.

In addition to standard ad breaks, the show was backed by lucrative multi-year corporate sponsorships, such as a three-year, £20million deal with TalkTalk struck in 2010.

Judges were already, or became, household names, with Sharon Osbourne and Louis Walsh joining Cowell at the start in 2004.

By 2019, with The X Factor: Celebrity, Nicole Scherzinger had joined Simon and Louis, with Dermot O'Leary the host.

The rights to The X Factor are owned by 6-year-old Cowell and distribution company Fremantle, who run Talkback Thames.

He has signed up for a Sky documentary about the show, with production firm 72 Films, along with other former judges such as Cheryl Cole. It is due to air next year.

An insider said: "The celebratory documentary is going to explore the cultural phenomenon that The X Factor was and is likely to remind fans about its success."

Asked in May if The X Factor could return, Cowell told the Tales from the Celebrity Trenches podcast: "Yeah, we talk about it a lot. Do you bring it back as X Factor or do you bring it back as the Z Factor?

"There's still no question, the power of TV in terms of getting people to know an artist. It's so important if you're not writing your own material. The truth is there's something about being on a big screen. You hear about these artists who break online, but so rarely.

"Truth is, I guess, thank God, people like being on TV."

Speaking at the Edinburgh TV festival last week, Kevin Lygo, ITV's Managing Director, Media and Entertainment said the channel needed to take "more risks".

He said: "Because we're in a very good position with entertainment – with I'm A Celebrity . . . and Britain's Got Talent and The Masked Singer and so on – we must take risks with new shows. And, honestly, if one in eight becomes the next Britain's Got Talent, that's a win.

"So you've got to expect that they won't all work, and it's harder and harder now to bring people to new shows. That's why you're seeing more and more reboots everywhere.

"We're continuing to try new shows and so long as they're good in themselves, I don't mind the odd failure. Otherwise you're just going to shrink and shrink and do more episodes of The Chase." ITV and Fremantle declined to comment.

MIGRANT HORROR

Man dies, another stabbed and 2 burned on boat

Packed . . migrant dinghy last week

POLICE are investigating the death of a migrant on a boat bound for Britain.

The dinghy was allowed to continue on Friday after many of its passengers were rescued — including a man with stab wounds and two women with burns.

French detectives believe the dead man — a Afghan national aged 34 — may have been attacked by other migrants.

By THOMAS GODFREY

It comes after The Sun on Sunday revealed last month a murder probe was launched when a migrant's body was found on a beach near Calais.

His killers may have fled to the UK on a small boat.

In the latest incident, the dinghy was carrying at least 110 people when it launched from Grand-Fort-Philippe, near Calais, after being monitored by the coastguard overnight.

Authorities picked up 73 passengers including the Afghan man, who was airlifted to hospital where he died.

He is believed to have suffered a fatal heart attack.

The other 72 were taken back to France, but 45 migrants remained on the boat and continued their journey to Dover.

A France Maritime Prefecture spokesman said: "Early on the morning of August 28, the Ridens [rescue vessel] picked up 72 migrants requesting assistance. During the rescue, the vessel discovered one person in the boat suffering from cardiac arrest and three others who were wounded."

"The boat continued its journey, and its remaining 45 occupants were picked up by a British rescue boat."

Pictures showed men, women and children being processed through the Border Security Command facility in Dover.

EXCLUSIVE by THOMAS GODFREY

A CAR wash firm fined for employing illegal staff still holds a licence to sponsor foreign nationals on skilled worker visas.

Mayfair Carwash, which cleans motors for up to £50, was hit with the £160,000 penalty this year after a Home Office raid.

The Sun On Sunday visited the business this week and the man identified by staff as the manager shrugged when asked about the fine.

Marble Arch Express Ltd runs the car wash in central London and holds the Home Office licence on skilled worker visas.

The Home Office says our findings will form part of a probe into what businesses can bring in skilled work. Car washes were fined £2.6million for illegal labour between January and March.

The London-bound Greater Anglia service left the track near Wickford, Essex, on August 14 with 62 people on board but remained upright.

No-one was hurt. The Rail Accident Investigation Branch said CCTV from the train showed a "misalignment" at the point the driver reported.

Secrecy on Maj's 'horribilis' year files

EXCLUSIVE
by THOMAS GODFREY

WHITEHALL censors have slapped 97 secrecy orders on royal papers from Queen Elizabeth's "annus horribilis" – more than any other year.

The 1992 files were due to enter the National Archives from 2017 but officials have locked the huge number away in the past nine years.

Her Majesty's nightmare year saw Charles and Diana split, Windsor Castle burned in a fire, and the Squidgygate tapes leaked between Di and pal James Gilbey.

Andrew and Sarah's split was announced, and the divorce of Princess Anne and Mark Phillips was finalised.

The late Queen used the now-famous phrase in a speech in November 1992, just four days after the Windsor blaze.

She said of the year: "In the words of one of my more sympathetic correspondents, it has turned out to be an 'annus horribilis'."

It is unclear exactly which files have been kept under lock and key instead of being handed over to archivists, or which of the Royal Family they concern.

Royal secrecy powers have been used more often as controversies engulfed the family.

The figures were obtained through a parliamentary question by Greens MP Sian Berry.

Buckingham Palace did not comment.

Diana is buried at her brother Earl Spencer's Althorp estate in Northants, which the family visited in July.

No details have been released of any formal royal plans for the day.

WEIGHING UP OFFERS

EXCLUSIVE by HANNAH HOPE

SARAH Ferguson is being lined up for a TV documentary and interview now she has returned to Britain.

She is weighing up "many approaches" she has received from producers after being mentioned in the Jeffrey Epstein scandal.

And the ex-wife of shamed former prince Andrew Mountbatten-Windsor is considering working on her own programme so she can retain control.

The news comes as The Sun revealed yesterday that she is renting a £10,000-a-month, six-bed property in the Home Counties.

A source said: "Fergie has been bombarded with requests from all over the world to do sit-down interviews, especially with the big streamers, to tell her side of the story. She is looking at her options. For her, it's more about retaining editorial control rather than making money."

They went on: "Sarah has a tight-knit group of friends and is extremely well connected. She would only allow someone she knew well to tell her story."

In 2011 Fergie made her own six-part documentary, Finding Sarah: From Royalty to the Real World, with the Oprah Winfrey Network.

Last year, The Sun on Sunday revealed Fergie, 66, had written to Epstein, calling him a "supreme friend" – despite his sex crime convictions.

More allegations of contact between the two emerged in the release of the Epstein Files. US Congressman Suhas Subramanyam urged her to testify about their ties, though there is no suggestion she has committed a criminal offence.

In February she and Andrew were evicted from Royal Lodge in Windsor. Andrew moved to a farm on the Sandringham Estate in Norfolk, but until now Fergie had not set foot in the UK for at least seven months.

The mum of two was seen a handful of times, including being tracked down by The Sun to a £2,000-a-night spa resort in Austria. She also stayed at ex-boyfriend and benefactor Paddy McNally's Swiss ski chalet in Verbier.

Fergie is also not believed to have seen her daughter Princess Eugenie and new grandchild Adelaide in Portugal, despite reports to the contrary. Last night a spokesman declined to comment.

SEARCHES FOR MISSING

I LOVE YOU

Heartache . . . Pramod and his missing wife Sumitra

EXCLUSIVE
from AMIR RAZAVI in Nepal

Last words of Nepal Brit's new-wed wife

A BRIT whose newlywed wife is missing in the Nepal flood disaster yesterday revealed her final words to him were: "I love you so much."

Food truck owner Pramod Poudel told us of his last chat with Sumitra as he began his own search for her.

She is missing with his mum, brother and uncle after their entire village was destroyed.

Pramod, 34, last spoke with Sumitra, 25, over the phone at 4.15am UK time on Wednesday.

Moments later, a collapsed glacier sent water, ice and mud thundering down mountains – leaving hundreds dead and thousands missing on the Nepal-Tibet border.

Pramod flew to Nepal on Friday, and yesterday began a trek to scour the village of Sole in a desperate bid to find his loved ones.

He told The Sun on Sunday: "When I last spoke to her, she said to me, 'How are you? I love you so much'.

"I have not had contact with her since then. It's devastating – I don't even know how to explain how I'm feeling right now. I'm so worried about her, and all my family. I work so hard for them and they are my whole world.

"I'm very hopeful of finding them but I'm also praying to God."

British citizen Pramod, of Uckfield, East Sussex, was born and raised in the Nepalese village of Sole and moved to the UK when he was 18. The settlement had SATELLITE pictures from the Nepal-Tibet border show the extent of the destruction caused by the devastating Himalayan flash floods on Wednesday.

The image on this page — taken in 2024 — shows the border facilities in place and a basketball court at the busy Rasuwagadhi crossing.

But all of the infrastructure was obliterated by the sudden torrent of water, mud, rock and debris — as seen in the most recent photograph.

Shocking CCTV footage of the site being swept away by the landslide went viral on social media around the world.

Terrified people were filmed running for their lives during the disaster, which was caused by a catastrophic glacial ice-and-rock collapse.

The major route for traders, tourists and pilgrims towards Mount Kailash and Lake Manasarovar is now impassable.

The area, which also borders Tibetan county Gyirong, is thought to be the worst hit valley.

A Chinese rescue team said they found "nothing but ruins" when they finally managed to reach the epicentre of the flash floods on Friday.

A group of 21 rescuers with a search dog crossed mountains and valleys using ropes to navigate forests and cliffs after roads were destroyed.

Zou Mingqi, a member of the search-and-rescue team, said: "There was no road . . . it was all virgin forest and sheer cliffs.

"As far as the eye could see, there was nothing but ruins."

around 60 houses and more than 150 residents before the flood wiped it out almost entirely.

He had married Nepalese Sumitra in June and she had been staying with his family in Sole while he returned home to the UK for work.

His mum Tulisa, 52, brother Pardip, 31, and uncle Madhav, 64, have also disappeared.

We joined Pramod at the start of his trek, some 2,000 metres high in the Himalayas.

He hiked through the mountains with relatives because a bridge leading to Sole was ripped apart by the floods.

Pramod, known as Pedro to his British pals, declared: "Around 90 per cent of the people and all of the houses have been taken by the flood.

"It will be very hard for me to see the village now there is nothing left. I am praying my family were able to escape. Some people have said they have seen my brother and my mum, but I don't know how true that is."

He is one of a number of Brits who have travelled to Nepal to hunt for their relatives after the flash floods, which began near Nepal's border with China-controlled Tibet.

Yesterday, Nepal's disaster authority said the death toll was at least 675, with nearly 3,000 missing.

In a glimmer of hope for the families of the missing, Australian trekker Cara Serevino, 25, has been found safe.

In a statement thanking a rescue crew, Cara said: "My heart goes out to all the Nepalese hikers who lost their lives and towns.

"I feel for the families of those still missing, I know how much my family and friends went through."

Among those who remain unaccounted for are 33 Brits, many of whom were on a pilgrimage to Mount Kailash. The youngest Brit missing is 13-year-old Syna Sahu, from Cobham, Surrey, who was travelling with her family.

The number of dead on the Chinese side is seven, with 554 missing.

Some 93,000 have been affected by the floods but the risk of fresh torrents, caused by two lakes formed by the disaster, continued to ease.

The Sun on Sunday yesterday visited some of the villages ravaged by the floods, where scenes of sadness and destruction were still rife.

Narayan Pyakyrel, 38, was trawling barefoot in thick mud on the banks of a river, looking for the bodies of his two sisters-in-law.

He said: "Six people, including my sisters-in-law, drowned here.

"We've come to look for bodies here every day. We're going through emotional turmoil."

Nepal's finance minister Swarnim Wagle said the country would need $5billion (£3.7billion) to rebuild.

Miliband: Welfare of Brits is a priority

By LEN READ

THE welfare of Brits caught up in the disaster in Nepal is a "top priority", Foreign Secretary Ed Miliband has said.

A UK Rapid Deployment Team arrived in the capital Kathmandu yesterday to assist with rescue operations.

It is made up of specially trained volunteers who can be posted at short notice to support British nationals during overseas crises and major emergencies.

The team will help coordinate assistance for Brit nationals arriving at and departing airports.

It will also assist those seeking information about missing relatives and liaise with local authorities and emergency responders.

Mr Miliband said: "Our thoughts remain with everyone affected.

"The safety and welfare of British nationals is our top priority.

"Our staff are working closely with the Nepali authorities, emergency responders and our embassy in Kathmandu to ensure those affected can access assistance and information they need."

The Government has also pledged a £5million aid package.

4 'lost' in Thailand

FEARS are growing for a British family believed missing in Thailand.

Jade Macdonald, 40, her partner Sunny Locke, 34, and sons Lenny, four, and Rocco, two, arrived in Phuket in May

But relatives have not heard from them for weeks and have contacted Dyfed-Powys cops.

Jade's sister Jemma Hearne, of Fishguard, Pembrokeshire, said: "They were last seen in the Bangkok area."

WOMEN 'COULD DIE' OVER EARLY RELEASE

Warning . . . Rosie Duffield

WOMEN "could die" if domestic abusers are let out of prison early, a charity has warned.

And independent MP Rosie Duffield – herself a domestic abuse survivor – has said No10 is "gambling with lives".

The Government is due to announce details of its early release scheme on Tuesday.

By KATE FERGUSON

Hundreds of inmates are expected to benefit in order to free up spaces in prisons.

PM Andy Burnham is expected to announce that PC Andrew Harper's killers will be excluded from the scheme, but many other serious offenders are set to walk free. Veronica Oakeshott, from the Women's Aid charity, is calling for domestic abusers to be kept behind bars.

She said: "There is a possibility offenders released under this scheme will go on to murder a victim. For some perpetrators, prison is just a brief pause in a pattern of abusive behaviour which they have every intention of continuing."

Canterbury MP Ms Duffield was subjected to terrifying verbal abuse, humiliation and financial control by a former partner.

She said: "The truth is, I still sometimes look over my shoulder because of my ex. Domestic abusers in prison will have been sitting there stewing, blaming the woman and thinking, 'How can I take her down when I'm out?'.

"Releasing domestic abusers early is gambling with lives. You don't know which one will try to get revenge on his ex."

Greens' rationed meat call

By SOPHIA SLEIGH

WOKE Greens want to bring back rationing for meat, fuel and flying.

One plan calls for the Government to allocate dairy, meat and petrol in order to "reduce consumption". A proposed motion by the party, led by Zack Polanski, says the move will drive down greenhouse gas emissions.

It says: "Each person to be limited to a certain quantity of these high carbon goods and services during transition to a zero-carbon economy."

Another proposed motion for the party's October conference calls for a 50 per cent cut in animal farming to cut meat and dairy consumption.

Tory chairman Kevin Hollinrake said: "The Greens would hand the state control over what's on your plate."

A Green Party spokesman said: "We received hundreds of motions but we only have time to debate a few of them."

Lunar fly 4's gongs

THE Artemis II astronauts who flew around the moon have received the United States' highest space honour.

President Donald Trump gave the Congressional Space Medal of Honor at Houston's Johnson Space Center to the Nasa team of four whose lunar flyby in April set a new distance record.

Americans Reid Wiseman, Victor Glover and Christina Koch and Canada's Jeremy Hansen became the first astronauts to travel to the moon in 50 years.

Van man killed by train at crossing

By JORDAN FARRELL

A MAN died after a train smashed into a van at a level crossing yesterday.

Passengers on the service were left shaken and had to be evacuated on to the tracks as an investigation began.

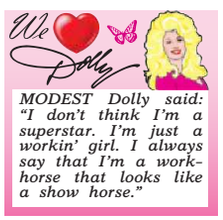
Police said there was one person in the van and he died at the scene in Burscough, West Lancs, despite the efforts of paramedics.

Two on the train suffered minor injuries in the crash just after 3pm.

One passenger said on social media: "Everyone on the train is OK, we are all just stuck waiting to be evacuated." Another wrote: "I'm still on the train with my kids, we are all shook."

Operator Northern said the Martins Lane level crossing crash blocked all lines between Wigan Wallgate and Southport.

British Transport Police said: "The incident is not being treated as suspicious. Enquiries are ongoing to establish the full circumstances of what happened."



MODEST Dolly said: "I don't think I'm a superstar. I'm just a workin' girl. I always say that I'm a workhorse that looks like a show horse."

Search in Channel

A MAJOR Channel search-and-rescue operation was launched last night after a French fishing boat with five people on board reportedly sank off the coast of Devon.

The Coastguard was alerted at about 6pm to a vessel "in distress" southwest of Eddystone Lighthouse, near Plymouth.

A rescue helicopter, a fixed-wing aircraft and RNLI lifeboats were scrambled from Plymouth and Falmouth.

More than 15 vessels were involved in the operation, including French navy patrol boat FS Garonne deployed from HMNB Devonport.

Local news website Plymouth Plus reported the fishing boat had sunk.

World Cup pals . . . Harrison puts arm around Maya

Maya's Miami Mr Nice

EXCLUSIVE by SCARLET HOWES & BENEDICT ELLIOT

LOVE Island's Maya Jama enjoyed an "away fixture" with a high-flying playboy financier during the World Cup, The Sun on Sunday can reveal.

Harrison Bancroft is said to have "comforted and supported" Maya in Miami shortly after her split from Man City and Portugal defender Ruben Dias.

But yesterday sources close to Maya, 32, insisted that the pair have been "good friends for a long time".

Pictures and video online showed Maya in a bar with 26-year-old Harrison and them together in a chauffeur-driven car drinking wine.

An onlooker also saw them in the rooftop bar of a £600-a-night five-star hotel on Miami's seafront. The onlooker said: "It looked like they were having lots of fun. There was lots of laughter and they were quite flirty with each other."

Maya met with Harrison on a flying visit to the US last month to watch England play Norway in the World Cup quarter-final.

She posted pictures of herself from inside the Miami Stadium where she cheered on the Three Lions stars, and sang Oasis hit Wonderwall with fans after England's 2-1 victory. The same Instagram reel of pictures showed Harrison with his arm around Maya in the hotel bar.

Afterwards the presenter, model and actress had to dash back to London to host Love Island: Aftersun.

She filmed herself in the back of a car with Harrison, saying: "I had my car outside the stadium with my suitcases in so I could watch the match and now I'm on my way to the airport." The pair then sing "football's coming home" before Maya says: "And now I'm going straight to Aftersun so you will see me on live TV Asap."

A source said: "Harrison's a bit of a playboy but he's been friends with Maya for a long time and has been a comfort and support to her. After her split from Ruben she met up with Harrison at the World Cup in Miami and they had a great, fun, time together."

Harrison, from Hertfordshire, owned a Midlands-based business called Bancroft Capital Investments Limited, which was dissolved last year.

He moved to Miami where he became vice-president in May of a tech consultancy firm called InterEx Group.

The Sun revealed that month that Maya and Ruben had split after 18 months of dating. She had left London and moved north to be closer to him, with the pair moving into a mansion in Alderley Edge, Cheshire.

The split came three weeks before Maya flew to Inverness to film her part in the next series of The Celebrity Traitors.

A source close to Maya said: "Maya is in a really great place and enjoying spending the summer with her friends and family ahead of a busy work period." Maya and Harrison were approached for comment.

Social media must face a reckoning like cigarette firms

THE world is waking up to the fact that social media is the tobacco of our time.

All-pervasive. Addictive. Toxic.

And this stuff can kill you.

In a landmark legal case in the US, Meta – the owner of Instagram and Facebook – has agreed to pay up to £13billion to settle claims brought by 29 US states that its platforms harmed children.

While denying all wrongdoing, Meta promised to make major safety changes.

Instagram and Facebook will impose daily usage limits, restrict the night-time access of children and enhance measures to stop kids viewing harmful content – while calling on rivals TikTok and YouTube to implement similar measures.

"We want to get this right for parents and teens," said a Meta spokesman.

Making social media safer for our children is a noble goal.

But how safe can it ever really be?

It feels like big tech just had its big tobacco moment.

In 1950, an article published in the British Medical Journal linked smoking to heart disease and lung cancer for the first time.

Nearly 50 years later, in 1998, the four largest US tobacco companies reached a massive £150billion settlement with 46 US states for tobacco-related healthcare costs.

In 1998, my father had been dead from smoking-related lung cancer for 11 years and my mum was dying from it.

My parents grew up in an age when smoking was considered sophisticated, cool – even healthy. In the middle of the last century, the tobacco giants actually had men in white coats lying that their product was positively good for you. "Give your throat a vacation," sighed one Camel campaign. "Smoke a FRESH cigarette."

My father and mother both gave up smoking years before they died. But it still killed them – and many of their generation.

Now there is a new poison on the market.

What nobody yet knows is what social media is doing to the mental health of the youths who are growing up with it.

The US states who brought legal action against Meta – whose CEO is Mark Zuckerberg – claimed it used its platforms to "entice, engage and ultimately ensnare youth and teens" while ignoring the damage it did to "the mental and physical wellbeing of America's youth".

In Australia, they have gone further than anywhere else in restricting the use of social media among children.

Australia's social media ban for under-16s came into effect in December last year, with tech giants facing fines of up to £26million for failing to block children's accounts.

But despite the ban, social media use is on the RISE among Aussie under-16s. It has become the equivalent of a sneaky fag behind the bike shed – something the cool kids do.

There is a mental health crisis among our young but the final bill for the generations growing up with social media will not be known for decades.

The recent spate of "joyriding" – such a wretched misnomer – is enabled, encouraged and urged on by social media platforms. "Joyriding" clips would simply not be happening if cretins were not chasing the fleeting fame of clicks. Lives are being lost, or ruined forever, because some pathetic little bastard in a balaclava ("no face, no case") is chasing likes on TikTok.

BOSS . . . Zuckerberg

"You rag a car, annoy the cops and get loads of people watching on TikTok," one thicko told this newspaper. "I've got 700 followers." All this human misery – for 700 followers on TikTok!

The toothless Online Safety Act ostensibly exists to require tech companies and social media platforms to protect their users from harmful content.

It is simply not working. After The Sun's investigation into joyriding, TikTok removed content glorifying dangerous driving. It hardly needs to be said that these social media platforms should not need policing by newspapers. They PROFIT from harmful content. It should not have to be taken down – because it should not be on there in the first place.

As we learn from Australia, getting our kids to kick the habit will be no easier than it was to get my dad to quit his Old Holborn roll-ups, or for my mum to ditch her Silk Cut.

And as we just learned from the courts of America, social media companies must eventually face the same legal – and moral – reckoning that the cigarette giants finally faced.

Their product can destroy lives.

So when these mega-rich corporations profit from harmful content, we must hit them in the only place they will ever care about – the bottom line.

Because ultimately, they feel the same way about your children as the tobacco companies felt about my parents.

They don't give a damn.

HERO . . . PC Harper

KEEP KILLERS CAGED

A PETITION to prevent the early release of two of PC Andrew Harper's killers has now passed one million signatures.

No government can ever ignore that kind of public outcry.

Police chiefs have reportedly been told that Labour plans to tweak their widely despised Early Release Scheme legislation to keep Albert Bowers and Jessie Cole locked up.

This pair of smirking toerags have displayed not a shred of remorse.

They were sentenced to 13 years for manslaughter.

And under Labour's Early Release Scheme, they are STILL due to be released after just six-and-a-half years.

May I respectfully suggest that Justice Secretary Alex Norris pull his finger out?

Keeping these cretins caged for the full length of their sentence feels like the very least our Government can do.

You could lock them up for a lifetime, and they would still be getting off lightly for taking the life of PC Harper.

ALL eyes are on the young co-stars of glossy thriller, The Shards.

Homer Gere and Kaia Gerber looked gorgeous on the cover of Vogue. They looked lovely watching Roger Federer play in New York.

And I have no doubt at all that they look fabulous in The Shards.

But why does the world care?

Because Homer's dad is Richard Gere and Kaia's mum is Cindy Crawford, and their parents were once a hot item.

And because nepotism increasingly makes the modern world go round.

Dolly changed the world with kindness

DOLLY Parton was a one-woman Lennon and McCartney.

The country music legend, who has died at the age of 80, was also a film star, a consummate performer, a literacy advocate and a pretty good stand-up comedian.

"I have small feet," Dolly liked to quip, smiling above her globally famous decolletage. "Because nothing grows in the shade."

But above all, this fabulous woman was a songwriter.

Legend has it she wrote I Will Always Love You – a strong contender for the greatest love song ever written – on the SAME DAY she wrote Jolene, probably the best song ever written about sexual jealousy.

Dolly demurred at the legend, because both classic songs were written during the same creative burst in 1973.

And she had no need to big herself up.

Her mentor in Nashville was country legend Porter Wagoner, who inspired I Will Always Love You. Made famous by Whitney Houston and embraced by millions as the ultimate hymn to romantic heartbreak, the song was actually about Dolly's professional split from Porter. She may have been as sweet as molasses, but she had plenty of Smoky Mountain grit in her.

Married to her late husband Carl Dean for 59 years, she never had children of her own. "My songs are like my children," she said. "I expect them to support me when I am old."

And nobody did more to change the lives of millions of children.

Dolly grew up in grinding rural poverty up in the Great Smoky Mountains of Tennessee – one of 12 children with a father who could neither read nor write. In memory of her beloved dad, Dolly set up her Imagination Library, mailing more than 300million books to some 150m children.

Dolly Parton changed the world. And she did it all with that 50million-dollar smile.

SUPER . . . Sweeney

SYD'S STAR'S FALLEN

SYDNEY SWEENEY squeezes into a Wonder Woman costume – yet something feels not quite right.

The obvious difference between Sydney as the Seventies superhero and Linda Carter's original Wonder Woman is, of course, that Sweeney is a blonde and Carter was a brunette.

But it is more than that.

Wonder Woman lasso? Check.

Wonder Woman tiara with red star? Check.

Then what about that weird midriff area – the gold cosmic cummerbund linking the top half of the outfit to the bottom half?

REAL STAR . . . Linda

But no – Linda Carter wore exactly the same thing, although her gold was of a much brighter and shinier hue.

Then it clicked – it is Sydney's Wonder Woman pants that are so jarring.

Or rather, the stars on Sydney's pants.

There are not nearly enough of them.

Wonder Woman's pants were emblazoned with stars beyond counting – an entire Milky Way of stars.

And Sydney Sweeney has only a handful of white stars on her blue Wonder Woman knickers.

But then I finally realised what was REALLY troubling me.

Fifty years after the Seventies, I can still vividly recall exactly what Wonder Woman was wearing.

THE King and Queen announce they are going on an autumn tour of the Caribbean on the very same day that a private jet flies Harry and Meghan back to the UK.

The Duke and Duchess of Sussex are back!

And Charles and Camilla are off!

I am sure it is just a coincidence.

THE Sun ON SUNDAY SAYS 30|08|26

ANDY BURNHAM'S honeymoon is well and truly over.

On Tuesday he will finally have to stand up in Parliament and tell MPs what his plans really are.

The weeks of carefully placed soundbites and soft policy initiatives will finally be met with the hard reality of hostile questioning.

It is time for some straight talking, particularly on the economy.

Last week Mr Burnham was making sympathetic noises to the business community. He has indicated that helping firms will be one of the big themes when he addresses MPs.

Criticism . . . Ashley

'Deluded' PM must listen to business

The PM said he was "acutely conscious" of how hard the trading environment is on the High Street and vowed: "I'm trying to make life easier."

But it all sounds like classic Burnhamism. Warm words to lift expectations tempered by the "challenging" fiscal backdrop.

His predecessor Sir Keir Starmer liked to call this "realistic hope". And look where that got him.

If the PM really wants to help he must cut business taxes and lower the cost of creating jobs.

But don't just take our word for it, Mr Burnham. Listen to the people who actually run big firms.

Mike Ashley employs 30,000 people. He calls the PM's ideas on reviving the High Street "delusional".

Lord Stuart Rose was boss of Marks and Spencer, which employs 65,000 people. He called Mr Burnham's plans "a lot of bs".

And today Lord Richard Walker, chairman of the Iceland supermarket which employs almost 30,000, has a direct message: "Make it cheaper to employ people, invest and grow."

If Mr Burnham wants to help employers he must listen to their critical voices.

Growing business not only boosts the economy, it also gets Neets into work and lowers the welfare bill.

That's a triple bullseye.

Make sure you hit the target, PM.

We've hit a brick wall

RUINOUS energy costs don't just wreck family budgets.

They also hold back our industry.

Construction experts say British-made bricks are now so expensive that it is cheaper to buy them from Europe. Last year we imported a staggering 352million.

This crushing energy price burden is stifling firms and jobs.

As he plans his budget, Andy Burnham should remember one thing:

You can't build a better Britain if it is all made from foreign bricks.

the SUNDAY ISSUE | ICELAND STORES BOSS ON WHY GOVT MUST BACK BUSINESS, NOT BAILOUTS

Dear Prime Minister,

Stop focusing on the cost of living, start focusing on getting Brits to work

BRITAIN must stop managing decline and start rewarding work again.

It's time for British politics to stop focusing on the cost of living and start focusing on the cost of getting Britain back to work.

That's my view as a businessman and the former government's Cost of Living Champion, where I argued strongly for more targeted help for families who simply could not absorb soaring household bills.

That was the right thing to do, but now we need to face our uncomfortable truth head on.

We cannot fix the cost of living as Bailout Britain in which every problem is answered with another subsidy, benefit or demand on businesses to pick up the bill.

Because ultimately there is only one sustainable answer to the cost-of-living crisis: A country that grows, creates good jobs and allows people to keep more of what they earn.

Brave decisions

That is why I welcome Andy Burnham saying he wants to be a pro-business Prime Minister.

He is right to talk about investment and wealth creation. Britain badly needs both.

But warm words towards business won't be enough. The Prime Minister and his new Chancellor, John Healey, now need to be brave enough to change the direction of the economy.

And their first priority should be simple: Make it cheaper to employ people, invest and grow.

Businesses do not create jobs in a vacuum.

Every rise in employers' National Insurance, every punishing business rates bill, and every other additional cost imposed by Whitehall changes the calculation about whether to create another job.

Those decisions multiplied across every business in the country determine whether Britain grows or stagnates. So the October Budget should begin shifting the tax burden away from jobs and productive investment.

By RICHARD WALKER

Former Cost Of Living Czar to Keir Starmer and chairman of Iceland supermarket

Cut the cost of employing people and go further on business rates. Give companies the confidence that if they invest in Britain today, government will not simply come back and tax that investment tomorrow.

The fact is that successful businesses do more to remove poverty than any support programme can.

It's time to make the brave decisions on welfare and use that money to boost business confidence and, ultimately, generate the taxes that pay for our schools, hospitals and public services.

I learnt that lesson early in my career, establishing a business in Poland – a country that has since spent decades investing, building infrastructure, developing skills, attracting businesses and integrating itself into global supply chains.

This month, S&P Dow Jones Indices announced that Poland would be upgraded to developed-market status.

Britain needs some of that hunger again and nowhere is that more urgent than with our young people.

The latest figures show 981,000 young people aged 16 to 24 are not in employment, education or training. Yes, that number has finally fallen below a million. But it is still 30,000 higher than a year ago. As a father, that horrifies me.

Behind that statistic are hundreds of thousands of young lives at risk of starting adulthood without the routine, confidence, skills, friendships and sense of purpose that work can provide.

I believe work is a moral mission. Good work gives people independence and dignity, and long periods without it are associated with poverty and poorer mental and physical health.

Of course there will always be people who are ill, disabled or facing circumstances in which the state must support them. A decent society protects them.

But compassion also means recognising that the welfare state should be a safety net and a springboard, not a system that leaves people who can work parked on benefits and written off.

We need dramatically better routes from school into work: Proper apprenticeships, vocational training and work experience, developing skills that employers actually need.

I therefore welcome the Prime Minister's focus this week on creating more work placements.

But businesses will create far more opportunities if government removes the barriers stopping them from hiring in the first place.

Stake in future

Lower the cost of creating jobs, help businesses invest in skills, and make sure work always pays. We must always give young people a real route into those jobs and stop entry-level jobs being replaced by AI.

Do that and Britain gets a triple dividend. People move from welfare into wages. The benefits bill falls and tax revenues rise. Businesses gain the people and skills they need to grow and, most importantly, a generation currently being offered too little hope gets a stake in the country's future.

I know how painful the cost-of-living crisis has been. But the biggest mistake we could make now would be to confuse helping people through a crisis with accepting the conditions that created it.

Britain cannot redistribute its way to prosperity. We have to build our way there.

Andy Burnham says he wants to get Britain's economy moving again.

Now he and the Chancellor must prove they are prepared to make the difficult choices required to do it.

TV Piers stumps up to aid groom

By ALEX WEST

CRICKET fan Piers Morgan has chipped in £1,000 to help a bride-groom pay for a private helicopter so he can play at Lord's the day after his wedding.

Team captain Peter Melhuish, 32, was delighted when his side Blackheath CC won a place in the Cawston Press Village Cup final.

But the match is to be held at the North West London ground the day after Peter marries 32-year-old Izzy Upton 240 miles away in Abergele, North Wales.

The five-hour road trip would mean a 5am taxi for next Sunday's 11am start. But a £10,000 flight would be about an hour.

Piers, also a village cricketer, said: "I'm glad you will now be living my dream. Good luck."

Peter, from Guildford, Surrey, said: "It'd be amazing if we can pull something together."

IN 1977, Dolly sang for the Queen at the Royal Variety Show. She recalled: "I was scared to death that I wasn't going to know how to curtsy."

Bar jiver's knife rap

A DAFT dance in a pub cost a tipsy customer £239 when he was caught on CCTV dropping a knife from his pocket.

Trucker Mihai Cazacu, 38, dropped the kitchen blade during the drunken jig towards the bar's exit.

A member of staff at The Duck, in Newark, Notts, spotted the weapon and picked it up, telling the reveller he could not have it back.

Cazacu, of no fixed address, was arrested by police minutes later. He admitted possession of a knife in a public place.

Nottingham magistrates gave him a two-month suspended jail sentence and ordered him to pay £85 costs and a £154 surcharge.

DOLLY said of her wigs: "The higher your hair, the closer you are to God. People ask how long my hair takes to do. I don't know, I'm never there."

BAY'S BROOKS NUDER

NEW Baywatch babe Brooks Nader goes for maximum exposure in a daring outfit.

The actress, 29, nearly fell out of a sheer, ankle-length dress which she shared on her Instagram story with the caption "happy girl".

The Sports Illustrated pin-up slips into the famous red swimsuit, right, in the Baywatch reboot which airs in January. Brooks plays Selene, a lifeguard captain on California's Zuma Beach.

She said getting the role was a "pinch-me moment".

The original Baywatch, starring Pamela Anderson and David Hasselhoff, ran from 1989 until 2001.

TOP LINO AXED ON CONDUCT WITH A WOMAN

By RACHEL DALE & BENEDICT ELLIOT

PREMIER League assistant referee Simon Bennett has been suspended over allegations of inappropriate behaviour with a woman.

The married £110,000-a-year senior linesman has not officiated this season after a probe was launched when concerns were raised about his conduct.

He last ran the line on May 24, the final day of last season, in Brighton's 3-0 home defeat to Man United.

The former teacher, 41, had been selected and listed as an official by the Premier League for this season but has now gone to ground, it is said.

A source told The Sun on Sunday: "He has closed all his social media accounts and pretty much disappeared since he was suspended.

"The investigation is into his inappropriate behaviour with a woman.

"It has obviously raised eyebrows in the refereeing world because it goes against the grain of the job itself.

"Refs are supposed to ensure high standards on the pitch, so you'd hope they would do the same off the pitch.

"But we have to await the findings of the investigation now."

Bennett, of Kidsgrove, Staffs, studied at Manchester Metropolitan University and taught at The Fallibroome Academy in Macclesfield, Cheshire, before becoming a full-time official.

In action . . . linesman Bennett at game

He has worked in the Premier League since 2011 and it is not known if he is still being paid. He has been on Fifa's assistant referees list since 2013. He occasionally acts as an assistant video referee.

Refereeing body Professional Game Match Officials Limited, now called Pro Ref, the FA and Bennett have all declined to comment.

Sex snap cop fired

POLICE chiefs took five years to sack a cop who sent a sexual image of himself in uniform to a member of the public.

PC Sean Llewellyn, 37, sent the inappropriate photo under a fake name on several dates in 2021.

An investigation found the Gwent Police officer had breached professional standards of behaviour.

He quit two days before a disciplinary hearing last week — where he was sacked in his absence and barred from working for any police force.

Supt Sam Payne said: "Sometimes investigations can take longer to get to the hearing stage than we would like."

Balcony fall arrest

A MAN was arrested on suspicion of attempted murder after another male fell from a balcony.

The victim suffered life-threatening injuries and remained in a critical condition in hospital last night.

Emergency services were called to reports he had plunged from flats in Salford, Gtr Manchester, shortly after midnight yesterday.

The incident has been referred to the Independent Office for Police Conduct because both he and the suspect, who is aged in his 20s, had earlier contact with cops, the Greater Manchester force said.

FANCY LIVING TO 100? TRY THESE TIPS

MORE and more of us could live to 100 – but making sure you get there in good health too is another matter.

By SARAH ARNOLD and NADIA COHEN

Latest figures from the Office For National Statistics show there were 15,172 people aged 100 or over in 2025 — a 21.6 per cent increase since 2015.

Some researchers believe advances in medicine and our understanding of ageing could enable more people to reach 110, 120 or beyond.

Leslie Kenny, the co-founder of longevity company Oxford Healthspan, has a biological age of 21 at 61.

The mum-of-two says: "There are things you can do to increase your chances of a long and healthy life. It's about ageing well in terms of your physical, mental and social health."

Here Leslie, who is writing a new book on the secrets to a healthy life, reveals how to add years to your life.

TEN YEARS

Women can gain 10.4 years and men 10.8 years from the age of 40 by ditching ultra-processed foods and choosing wholegrains, nuts, fruit, veg, legumes and fish, as well as less sugar, processed meats and refined grains, a study by the University of Newcastle shows.

NINE YEARS

Going to a 90-minute gig twice a month could add an astonishing nine years on to your life, says Goldsmith's University data psychologist Patrick Fagan.

This is because concerts can increase your feeling of well-being, which has been linked to lifespan.

SEVEN YEARS

Having a purpose for 90 minutes a week, such as helping a neighbour with shopping or picking up litter, could add seven years.

A University of Michigan study of 7,000 over-50s found those with the lowest sense of purpose had a greater risk of dying.

FIVE YEARS

Looking after your grandchildren can help you stay young at heart. Over-70s who provide occasional, non-custodial care, according to one German study, had a 37 per cent lower chance of dying over a 20-year period.

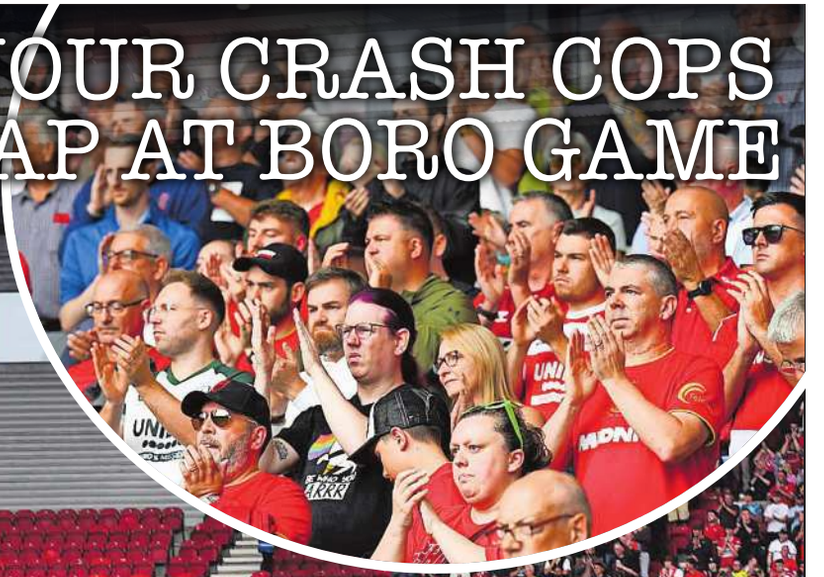
FANS HONOUR CRASH COPS
30,000 CLAP AT BORO GAME



Tribute . . screen & fans

A SALUTE TO HEROES

Dedicated . . . PC Clough

By THOMAS GODFREY and ROBIN PERRIE

THOUSANDS of football fans yesterday paid an emotional tribute to two police officers killed in a horror smash linked to gang violence.

The near 30,000 crowd at Middlesbrough's Riverside Stadium stood and applauded PC Tom Clough, 38, and PC Matthew Blades, 37, before yesterday's 3-1 win over West Brom.

The cops died when their patrol car was hit head-on by a Volkswagen Passat driving on the wrong side of the A66 near Middlesbrough after a police chase early last Saturday.

Moments before the match, the Championship club told fans: "We are showing our appreciation for the dedication and hard work of both men and Cleveland Police in protecting and supporting our local community.

"The commitment shown by officers and staff, often in challenging and demanding circumstances, plays a vital role in keeping residents safe and helping people feel secure in their homes, neighbourhood and local area."

Mourned . . . FC Hartlepool, where PC Blades coached kids, yesterday

As both sets of fans, players and the officials applauded, photos of the PCs were shown on a big screen.

One Middlesbrough fan said: "It's been a nightmare week for the town but especially for the officers' families.

"It was brilliant the club decided to do this tribute and the fans couldn't have backed it any better.

"It just goes to show that the vast majority of people in Middlesbrough are good, honest, decent people."

FC Hartlepool, where PC Blades coached kids, also held a minute's applause before a local league game. The crash also killed the five young men in the Passat, Michael Robert Cahill and Jakub Matusiak, both 23, Makai Saddington, 18, and 17-year-olds Theo Rae and Cole Worthy.

Some 24 suspects have been arrested in connection with the smash, which sparked tit-for-tat attacks in an apparent gang turf war.

Valentina Foster, seven, and her aunt Natalie McDonald, 34, died in a suspected arson attack on Wednesday.

Jaden Wright, 23, arrested on suspicion of murder over the fatal fire, was remanded in custody by Teesside JPs yesterday on GBH and strangulation charges relating to a separate incident.

Clips of chases after A66 carnage

EXCLUSIVE by THOMAS GODFREY

SICK social media clips showing joyrides and police chases are still live a week after the wrong-way crash near Middlesbrough that killed seven.

The Sun on Sunday found ten clips on Instagram, Snapchat and YouTube despite government calls for dangerous footage to be removed.

In one, a 17-year-old TikTok yob, who we are not identifying, is seen driving, according to his car's speedometer, at 165mph.

The 25-second clip, posted shortly after last Saturday's A66 carnage, was removed by TikTok on Monday, but not before thousands had seen it.

Another video still on the same account shows the teenager driving during a police chase.

We also found a Snapchat clip of biker joyriders goading police cars into a chase, Instagram accounts dedicated to high-speed pursuits and YouTube clips of crashes during joyrides.

Defence minister Luke Pollard has warned social media firms to remove posts featuring content that "celebrates dangerous behaviour on our roads".

The content is not automatically illegal under the Online Safety Act but can be removed by platforms if they deem it to violate their terms. The platforms were asked to comment.

Beach landing . . . Don

Death of D-Day's boy hero Don, 101

By LEN READ

A D-DAY hero who lied about his age to join up has died aged 101.

Don Turrell was 17 but forged a letter from his parents saying he was 18.

He later landed at the age of 18 on Sword Beach in Normandy a few days after June 6, 1944 – and did not think he would survive the fierce German onslaught.

Don's death was revealed by Dick Goodwin of the Taxi Charity For Military Veterans.

He said of Don's D-Day heroism: "Told to expect a dry landing, he stepped from the landing craft into water up to his neck. Surrounded by bodies from the previous days' fighting drifting around in the water."

Don was later seriously wounded in battle and used his rifle as a crutch to limp away. He was medically discharged.

He lived in Frinton-on-Sea, Essex, and leaves a daughter and son.

'Escobar' of Buxton threat to slice ears

By PAUL SIMS

A COCAINE dealer who called himself the "Pablo Escobar of Buxton" threatened to cut off rivals' ears, a court heard.

The threat – likening Liam Churchman to the Colombian drug lord – was in phone texts found by police during a raid in the Derbyshire town.

They also seized cocaine and scales at the property last year.

Other videos showed the bearded 37-year-old packing drugs, Derby crown court heard.

Police had arrested the dealer the year before after he crashed his car fleeing from another raid.

Churchman, of no fixed address, admitted supplying cocaine and driving dangerously during the police chase.

He was jailed for five years and nine months.

Police said: "These have been lengthy investigations – but it's good to see Churchman behind bars where he belongs."

CRISTIAN SLIP OVER INSTA PIC

WHOOPS . . . Cristian's snap with fellow newbies revealed Strictly set

NEW pro dancer Cristian Priori slipped up by inadvertently sharing a snap of the new set on his social media.

The Italian Latin champion, 34, posted a selfie with the four other new pros – Ukrainian Aleksandra Isaeva, South African Lethabo Monametsi, Bournemouth-born Maddie Ingoldsby and Canadian Mark Karmalita – to his 9,000 Instagram followers. But it featured the Strictly dancefloor in the background and the huge glitterball beneath scaffolding, which appeared to reveal a glimpse of the opening scenes for the new series starting next month.

MISSTEP . . . Cristian's in hot water

A source said: "He was reminded by a member of the team that it showed some staging that wasn't on TV yet so Cristian decided to delete it."

Pro dancers' fury as Giovanni criticises them in his book

FLOORED . . . Strictly pros stunned by Gio's revelations in his new book

STRICTLY'S pro dancers have been left shocked and hurt after Giovanni Pernice slated them in his new autobiography.

The Italian ballroom star said he felt abandoned by the group when he was axed from the show in 2024 following bullying complaints by actress Amanda Abbington.

Writing in Gio: Taking The Lead, the 35-year-old added that pro dancers "drink before the live show" while some engaged in horrific rows.

The revelations come just three weeks before Strictly's big relaunch following the departure of hosts Tess Daly and Claudia Winkleman.

A source said: "Many of them have been taken aback by the things that Giovanni has accused them of.

"He has started a guessing game now with his allegations and all of them have been tarnished.

"Some feel that he is trying to bring them down with him.

"They are doing their best to stay focused on the new series and can't publicly comment on his claims, but it's certainly left bad blood between them.

"Ironically, many of them still follow Gio on Instagram, and vice versa, and no one wants to be accused of snubbing him further. The book has just made a difficult situation ten times worse.

'Darkest days'

"The pros have been back in rehearsals over the last few weeks and even though there has been some chat about the book, they've been trying to focus on the new show. They've all got a job to do at the end of day."

Meanwhile, Strictly judges Shirley Ballas and Anton Du Beke have been publicly supporting Giovanni's book by liking his posts on Instagram.

Defending his behaviour towards Amanda, the dancer wrote: "There are still people on Strictly whose behaviour is far worse. One choreographer has been bullying, screaming at all the pro dancers, for years. Others drink before the live show."

EXCLUSIVE by HANNAH HOPE
Showbiz Editor

He added: "Even when we were on tour, tensions could run pretty high. There was once one horrific argument on the tour bus between a male and female pro.

"She had said something about his performance that didn't land very well. He was drunk and started screaming and shouting at her, in front of all the other pros, the celebrities and the producers. She was left in floods of tears.

"But on the whole, screaming rows are rare. The resentments tend to come out in a more bitchy, backstabbing way, whispers behind the back and comments to the producers.

"On the show, we had been constantly told we were a 'family', suggesting a happy bunch who all look out for each other. The reality was very different.

"In my darkest days, there was no 'family'. With the exception of the judges, it felt that they all turned their backs and looked the other way. There were a handful I had thought were good friends who went very quiet. I felt hugely betrayed by those I'd been closest to."

Amanda last weekend gave a statement regarding the memoir, which also claims she did a Nazi salute in front of him.

She said: "It's sad, though not surprising, that Giovanni is continuing down this route. He is grossly mischaracterising what happened to suit his own narrative."

Earlier this month, The Sun on Sunday revealed the BBC paid her a five-figure out-of-court settlement after her legal complaint over alleged mistreatment by Giovanni. The BBC upheld some of her claims and apologised to her after a five-month inquiry.

Strictly will be back for its new series in September, with bosses planning a tribute to Dolly Parton, who died aged 80 this week.

Gavin & Stacey actress Melanie Walters is tipped to star in it after her character Gwen was surprised by Ruth Jones as Nessa and Rob Brydon as Uncle Bryn performing Dolly and Kenny Rogers' hit Islands In The Stream.

THERE SHE GLOWS . . . Dani getting ready for last year's Strictly before being forced to pull out due to injury

DANI DYER BIAS ROW

A ROW about favouritism has broken out after it emerged that contestant Dani Dyer and head judge Shirley Ballas are very close.

The pair climbed Mount Kilimanjaro together in 2019 to raise money for Comic Relief. They were joined on the gruelling eight-day trek by several other celebrities including Ed Balls and Dan Walker.

A source said: "Shirley and Dani have been through a tough experience together, which bonded them for life. Shirley was like a second mother to Dani during that trip and they spent quality time together.

"Some pro dancers are worried that Shirley will favour Dani and be less tough on her because of their shared history. Of course, Shirley is a professional but it is hard to be objective when you have a genuine soft spot for someone."

A source added: "Shirley also did the hike with Dan Walker and was able to objectively judge him, even voting him out in the Dance off."

Dani was set to take part in last year's series with Nikita Kuzmin, but was forced to pull out days before the first live show when she broke her ankle.

At the time she said: "To say I'm heartbroken is the biggest understatement. I am so going to miss dancing with Nikita but will be watching closely and cheering all the couples on."

AMANDA BACK WITH TV ROLE

DRAMA . . . actress filming for series two of Apple TV's Down Cemetery Road

By HANNAH HOPE

AMANDA ABBINGTON has landed a major TV role opposite Oscar-winner Emma Thompson as she puts her Strictly Come Dancing bullying ordeal behind her.

The 54-year-old Sherlock star was snapped filming Apple TV drama Down Cemetery Road in North London last week wearing long brown locks, floral dress and a mac.

The prestige project, from the makers of Slow Horses, also features Ruth Wilson.

An onlooker said: "Amanda was all smiles on set as she got back to work after the Strictly drama.

"It was a busy and large-scale production, everyone seemed to be focused and working hard. Emma was also on set in character."

The pair are working on the second series of the highly acclaimed detective show, which was released last year, and followed a missing girl and house explosion.

It is Amanda's first big telly role since the 2024 Strictly crisis involving Giovanni. The Italian pro was put under investigation after Amanda complained about his treatment of her during rehearsals for the 2023 series.

He denied any wrongdoing. The BBC has since apologised to Amanda, upheld some of her complaints and given her a five-figure payout.

DOWNCAST . . . Amanda during rehearsals in 2023

While she has appeared in several theatre productions, Amanda questioned whether she would ever work in TV again.

She said previously: "I don't know what the industry thinks of me at the moment.

"I've been immersed in the aftermath of it all for a year.

"I don't know whether I've been cancelled or whether people don't like me any more, but I know I did what I did for the right reasons. I feel good about the future."

The series is due to be released next year.

Cricketer Amelia's gift of life to others

By ALEX WEST

A TEENAGE cricket star who died after collapsing at a match donated her organs to help other people in need.

Amelia Jones, 14, died earlier this month following a medical episode at the Grampound village ground in Cornwall.

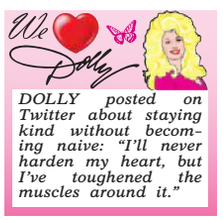
Days earlier, she had captained Cornwall Girls against Glamorgan in the under-14s age group.

Her family said: "She loved netball and cricket and had so many interests and little things that made her wonderfully and uniquely Amelia.

"She was exceptionally talented and academically gifted. The decision was made to donate her organs to help other suffering families.

"Her passing has left an unimaginable void in the lives of everyone who knew and loved her."

A fundraising site to help her family, which includes twin sister Charlotte, has raised more than £12,000.



DOLLY posted on Twitter about staying kind without becoming naive: "I'll never harden my heart, but I've toughened the muscles around it."

Store up for Xmas

TESCO, Sainsbury's, Asda and Morrisons already have Christmas promotions in their shops.

Many of the chains' stores have started selling festive chocs and biscuits.

Tesco has items such as Cadbury Christmas puds.

Morrisons has Countdown to Christmas stands with advent calendars and selection boxes.

Sainsbury's is stocking festive Bourbon Twists, and Asda has signs up saying "merry Christmas".

One shopper said: "It's 17 weeks away. Leave Christmas till November."

Morrisons said: "We start selling Christmas products a few months before Christmas because some of our customers like to plan in advance."

WHEN asked how she maintained her trademark glamorous appearance back in 2012, Dolly said: "It takes a lot of money to look this cheap."

Festival death is probed by cops

Fatal collapse . . . emergency crews at scene on Friday

WAS SIGN SECURED?

THE death of a man killed by a falling sign at a Christian festival is being investigated by police.

They are examining whether or not the structure was properly secured before it collapsed, with witnesses claiming it was blown over by strong winds.

The 41-year-old man, from Eastbourne, East Sussex, was crushed when a huge wooden archway gave way on Friday. Another six people were injured, two seriously.

Fred Abbott, a father of four, was sitting nearby when the structure fell at the sell-out Big Church Festival near Steyning, West Sussex. He described hearing a "massive crack and bang" and joined an estimated 30 to 50 people who scrambled to lift the heavy wooden sign off the injured festival-goers.

By LAUREN UTTLEY

Archbishop of Canterbury Dame Sarah Mullally was said to be "sad and shocked" by the fatality. She said: "I pray for his family, friends and loved ones as they grieve.

"I pray for those receiving treatment, and the healthcare workers looking after them.

"And I pray too for the other festival-goers, staff and event organisers as they come to terms with these tragic events.

"May the God of comfort and healing be with them all."

The three-day event, founded in 2009, is the UK's biggest Christian music festival with all 40,000 tickets sold. Organisers later cancelled the event and said: "Big Church Festival is about bringing people together. That community is grieving. We are heartbroken."

Det Chief Supt Richard McDonagh, of Sussex Police, said: "This is a tragic incident and our thoughts go out to the man's family and friends at this incredibly difficult time.

"I recognise the immense distress this will have caused people at the festival, and we are working with a number of partners as we seek to establish exactly what happened.

"We're urging anyone with information to come forward."

Katie also flirted with the crowd, saying: "There are so many fit people in here." It comes as Katie's husband LEE ANDREWS remains behind bars in Dubai. I am sure it will give her lots of material for her next album.

Posh Spice had her arm around her husband as they watched from the side of The Canopy stage.

Meanwhile, Harper looked stylish in her khaki green waterproof and black Hunter wellies as she stood at the front of the stage.

Romeo also got the fashion memo in a camouflage-print jacket and black beanie.

Cruz's girlfriend JACKIE APOSTEL supported him by sharing the band's merchandise on Instagram. She posted a picture of herself in a T-shirt saying "Cruz Beckham sang to me" and captioned it: "Reading, we might have some cute shirts for you gorgeous people at the show tomorrow."

It comes after the four-piece band released debut six-track EP Wear & Tear last week.

Cruz was the fourth nepo baby to take to the stage at Reading over the weekend. GENE GALLAGHER, son of OASIS frontman LIAM and ALL SAINTS singer NICOLE APPLETON, was there with band VILLANELLE.

COLDPLAY frontman CHRIS MARTIN's son MOSES performed with his band PEOPLE I'VE MET.

And VIOLET GROHL, daughter of FOO FIGHTERS' DAVE, also played.

KAYA HAS FOUND NEW GENTLEMAN

AMONG the murky underworld of thugs and murders on GUY RITCHIE's gangster comedy The Gentlemen, I can reveal that romance has blossomed behind the scenes.

The second series of the Netflix hit, which stars THEO JAMES, VINNIE JONES and MAYA JAMA, will return to our screens on Thursday.

The Netflix hit, which stars VINNIE JONES and MAYA JAMA, sees an aristocratic family turn to a life of crime.

But now KAYA SCODELARIO, who plays crime boss Susie Glass, and director ERAN CREEVY have struck up a romance.

They were seen holding hands at the tennis at Wimbledon last month in matching white outfits.

Eran also posted a pic on Instagram of the pair kissing in front of Alexandra Palace in North London during the open-air summer series last month.

A source said: "Eran and Kaya are in the early stages of a relationship and have seen their romance blossom over the summer.

"There is speculation that they may make their red carpet debut together at The Gentleman premiere next week."

They said in a joint statement: "Some time ago Kaya and Ben made the joint decision to end their marriage but continue to co-parent lovingly whilst remaining the best of friends."

Season two of the Netflix series will premiere at The Guildhall in London on Wednesday.

RIRI SPECIAL GUESTS FOR JAY-Z NIGHTS

JAY-Z is heading to London next week as he continues his 30th anniversary tour.

HOW TO GET FULL VALUE FROM SCHOOLWEAR

Laundry lessons

GETTING kids kitted out for the new term can cost a fortune, so make sure you keep school clothes in good condition.

By MEL HUNTER

A few simple habits can help uniforms stay fresh, clean and smart for longer.

Save on costly replacements with these tips . . .

HANG IT ALL: One of the easiest ways to make a uniform last is to get children into the habit of changing out of it as soon as they get home.

And encourage them to hang their clothes up. Crumpled clothes will look tattier and often they end up being put in the laundry basket sooner, costing you more in energy bills.

SPORTING CHANCE: PE clothes get whiffy after days at the bottom of a bag. Get kids into the habit of unpacking their kit as soon as they get home.

If it's extra-pongy, add half a cup of bicarbonate of soda to the machine with your usual detergent.

And a paste made from bicarbonate of soda and white vinegar makes short work of stubborn sweat patches.

STAIN PAIN: Grass, mud, ink and make-up can all wreak havoc on school clothes, so it pays to keep a stain remover in your cleaning cupboard.

Stardrops The Pink Stuff Miracle Laundry Oxi Stain Remover, 500ml, gets good reviews and is £1.50 at Sainsbury's.

For trickier marks, try Dr Beckmann Stain Devils, £2.99, dr-beckmann.com.

KEEP WHITES WHITE: White shirts, socks and PE tops can turn dull after repeated washing. Do whites separately from coloured clothing to keep them bright and avoid cramming too much into the machine. If a white top has a colourful logo, a colour catcher is the answer. A pack of 40 Dylon Colour Catcher sheets costs £3.75 with a Nectar card at Sainsbury's, down from £4.90.

MARK-IT DAY: Avoid clothes disappearing into the lost-property pile by naming everything before term starts.

You can get a Haber laundry pen with labels at Asda for £1.48. Mark stationery with a dab of nail varnish, so kids can put the right things back in their pencil case.

● All prices on page correct at time of going to press. Deals and offers subject to availability.

Caine's using his voice for A.I. fight

EXCLUSIVE by ELEANOR GUNN

SIR Michael Caine is lending his voice to a project exploring how technology can help combat online deepfakes.

The star, 93, has made recordings for the study into how well people can tell between real speech and AI-generated voices.

Participants will compare them to a vocal replica of the actor.

Dr Ben Gibb-Reid, of the University of York, said the project would study linguistic features that may act as "tells" of authenticity, and contribute to the need for voice-rights protection.

Get Carter actor Caine said he was pleased to help if his voice "can help protect the public from harmful deepfakes".

It was revealed yesterday that actors including Hugh Bonneville are backing the Save Our Voices Now campaign, which urges the Government to stop AI firms using their voices without permission.

ON her attention-grabbing outfits, the country singer said: "I describe my look as a blend of Mother Goose, Cinderella and the local hooker."

Stabbed at school

A BOY of 15 has been locked up for knifing a classmate at school.

The victim, also 15, was stabbed in front of other terrified pupils. He had emergency surgery for a stomach wound.

The attacker, who can't be named, smuggled two kitchen knives into the school in March.

He gave no comment interviews and the reason for the Nottingham stabbing was not explained.

At the city's crown court, the boy admitted wounding with intent and possessing a blade.

He got five years and seven months in a young offender institution.

Det Con Jaspal Nijjar said: "The victim could have lost his life."

WHEN asked about the key to her success, Dolly said: "Above everything else I've done, I've always said I've had more guts than I've got talent."

TELLY star Freddy Brazier's dog has a new lease of life as a social media personality.

Pocket bully Pablo faced being put down after he was seized by cops following two attacks on Freddy, 21, and his nan Jackiey Budden.

Pablo now has a new home in North London — and his own Instagram account where he can be seen in sunglasses and a gold chain.

His owner said: "I wanted to give Pablo a second chance. There is no such thing as a bad dog."

Freddy, the son of the late Big Brother star Jade Goody, needed stitches after he was mauled by Pablo hours after he wounded Jackiey, 69, in Bermondsey, South London.

CARROLL GIVEN JAIL WARNING

Outside court . . . Carroll

FORMER England footie ace Andy Carroll has dodged prison in a court cash row with his reality star ex-wife.

A judge said he could have been jailed after repeatedly breaching an order banning him from non-essential spending.

Chelmsford county court heard that Carroll spent

£69,181 that should have been preserved ahead of a five-day financial hearing next month.

But his lawyer said: "I would submit £69,000 is a drop in the ocean, given how much is involved, including significant legal fees."

In the 2019 Sunday Times Rich List, Carroll had a fortune of £19million.

The 37-year-old faced ex-Towie star Billi Mucklow, 38, as he admitted five breaches of a financial order. He is said to have splashed out £5,556 for new wheels on his car, given £10,000 to his girlfriend's brother and paid for his parents' building work.

Jenna Lucas, for Ms Mucklow, insisted: "Nothing was necessary expenditure. He has, I submit, thumbed his nose at the order of this court."

But Lauren Lanson, for Carroll, said: "He is not the most organised individual with control of his finances.

"He has other people who do that. He focuses on his work as a professional footballer." Carroll, who attended court with girlfriend Lou Teasdale, was hit with a fine of £20,000 after District Judge Teresa Foss reckoned that a prison term would be "too high a sanction".

He faces trial next year over allegations that he broke a non-molestation order.

The ex-Newcastle, Liverpool and West Ham star joined National League South side Dagenham and Redbridge in 2025 after spells with French clubs Amiens and Bordeaux.

Bake Off's Prue can back off on school dinners

DING, ding! Two foodie heavyweights are squaring off in a conflict you never thought you'd see.

It's a surprising clash but Jamie Oliver and Prue Leith are heading towards a simmering feud over school dinners.

This week, 20 years after Jamie sent the Turkey Twizzler disappearing off menus and towards the big bird in the sky, his activist charity exposed just how bad our kids' school dinners still are.

As part of its involvement with the School Food Project, which aims to help schools improve the quality of their food, Bite Back analysed nearly 400 secondary school menus and found 76 per cent had at least one confirmed breach of the current School Food Standards. More than half were still dishing up processed burgers and sausages, nuggets and goujons (think modern-day Twizzlers) and more than a third offered hash browns as a regular breakfast or break option.

Doesn't sound overly healthy, does it?

But hours later, fellow chef Prue chirped in. And her solution?

Force all kids to eat school dinners and ban all packed lunches to help children stay healthy and experience the "joy" of trying different foods.

She obviously has not taken a blind bit of notice of Jamie's new report or thought about how kids are guaranteed to head straight for those nuggets if they are on offer. Her comments make her sound like a sandwich short of a picnic. What she said could make sense if all school lunches were healthy, but as many are clearly still a big fat, greasy mess, it doesn't.

BAD TASTE . . . Leith

She admits the ban would be radical and "draconian" (you don't say, Prue!) but thinks it is necessary because "you can't police what parents put in" lunch boxes.

Wow. Next she'll be wanting CCTV to watch what Mum and Dad are dishing up at home.

Prue explained: "It's very hard if you're a mum walking around a supermarket with your child, and a child wants to have that chocolate bar and whatever in their lunch box.

"It's really hard because it's an easy way of sort of pleasing a child, and it's an easy way of almost buying love."

It's also very hard for a kid to ignore the hash browns their pals are tucking into when the school canteen smells like McDonald's.

She really does have a low opinion of parents, doesn't she?

Most of us are smart, most of us do care about what our kids put in their bellies and most of us make sure they're eating a reasonable diet.

Greasy muck

We dodge the temptation of that confectionary aisle in Tesco and order online instead so we can shove what we want in that lunch box and chastise our kids if they return with a full Tupperware.

Doing that is easier than policing school dinners when we are nowhere near that pile of warm, tempting, fried food. Let's not forget some kids have allergies and some can only eat certain foods too that school dinners can't cater for.

If you shop wisely, healthy packed lunches can be so much cheaper than the canteen offerings. But now, in the wonderful fluffy world of former Bake Off queen Prue, she wants free dinners for all kids.

Sounds great. How admirable. But who is paying for it all? If you shove that cost on to our skint Government we are all going to be coughing up for this greasy muck anyway.

It's a ridiculous idea. And Jamie would tell you that.

From this new term all kids whose parents are on Universal Credit will be eligible for free school food, which is the right thing to do. For those who can't afford to give their kids a hot meal of any kind, this will be a welcome relief.

Those who are having to pay, though, must be allowed to decide for themselves, to choose what their own hard-earned cash is spent on and what they feed their own kids.

Yes, some parents will make terrible choices. But if someone wants to fill a lunch box with junk, that's their responsibility.

Don't punish every sensible parent for the stupidity of others.

Only when school dinners are fixed can we really talk turkey, Prue. Until then, leave the parenting to the parents.

And keep your hands off our lunch boxes.

BACK . . . Harry & Meg

MEG'S PARTY PANIC

CAN we all please spare a thought for the parents at Archie and Lilibet's new school.

Forget the chaos at pick-up time with stay-at-home dad Harry collecting the sprogs along with his army of security. But just think of the birthday parties.

That invite to the local soft play, the passing of that scruffy parcel, and pizza washed down with squash just won't cut it any more.

Imagine Meg and her themed bashes, calligraphy-labelled party bags, array of home-made produce for the little cherubs to chuck about – and not to mention the NDA to sign at the door before you escape after two hours.

Sends a chill down my spine.

MY favourite Dolly Parton story is the one told by Julia Roberts about when they filmed Steel Magnolias together.

Julia tried to whinge about the hot weather but the late, great Dolly told her: "When I was a little girl, I wanted to be famous and I wanted to be rich, and now I'm both those things. I'm not going to complain about it."

We could all be a bit more Dolly. She was the original influencer.

WHAT A WEASEL

RUPERT Grint has a cheek, hasn't he?

He was one of the first Harry Potter stars to hit out at JK Rowling over her stance on trans issues.

But now he's snapped up a lucrative Broadway role to reprise his role as Ron Weasley.

His morals out the window, the cash in his pocket.

He's a weaselly money grabber.

But what about the theatre? They're a disgrace for hiring him.

I just hope that it's a flop.

TRAGIC . . . host Jenni

BRIGHT LIGHTS DANGER

PRESENTER Jenni Murray tried to make a difference when she hosted Radio 4's Woman's Hour. I hope she can continue to do so after her tragic death.

An inquest heard this week that her fatal car crash was triggered by headlight glare. It's a growing problem.

So many people now hate driving in the dark because they are dazzled by lights.

It's time to regulate headlight intensity and alignment before more people suffer the hideous consequences that Jenni did.

TOP Gear is coming back. I truly wish it wasn't. The BBC may be very excited, but if ever there was a show that should come with a trigger warning, this is it.

There have been too many safety cock-ups, crashes and injuries.

This is one classic that should be shoved in the garage and kept there.

ADHD BILL IS RIP-OFF

THERE'S a new report slating companies that charge a fortune for people to get diagnosed with ADHD and autism.

Some are billing the NHS up to £3,000 a pop for an ADHD diagnosis, and there are 800,000 people on NHS waiting lists for an assessment in England.

Under an initiative called Right To Choose, they can be assessed privately and the NHS will pick up the bill. Great.

But I don't just blame the assessors, I blame some of those who want an assessment.

Those who have managed to live their lives perfectly well for decades.

They've navigated school, work, relationships and family life but suddenly need a label on their heads.

Unless they've actually truly struggled, I really don't get the need.

'TAX RISK' 400 IN GONGS BLACKLIST

MORE than 400 public figures are on an honours "blacklist" due to their controversial tax affairs.

HMRC officials, asked to vet possible recipients of awards such as a knighthood or OBE, have put 33 in a "high risk" category, and judged another 377 to be "medium risk".

An official transparency release showed that of the 410 total for the last 11 years, 135 high-profile people were placed in those categories in just the last two years.

EXCLUSIVE by ANDY BUCKWELL

It said: "The Honours and Appointments Secretariat may ask HMRC to advise about any potential risk posed to the Government and the Crown by honours candidates in respect of their tax affairs. Checks are requested on a proportionate basis, taking account of the level of the honour and individual's profile."

'Snubbed' . . . McIlroy

Last year it was reported that golfer Rory McIlroy, 37, lost out on a knighthood in the New Year's Honours after an intervention by tax officials.

A Government spokesperson said: "The main honours committee takes into account the risk rating alongside other information to decide whether to recommend the award of an honour."

EXCLUSIVE: HOW

From GRAEME CULLIFORD

DRESSED conservatively, Julie Potter looks a picture of respectability as she fills out a 32-page benefits claim for a total stranger.

The expat boasts that, over the past decade, she has helped hundreds of pensioners apply for Attendance Allowance payments worth more than £5,000 a year.

The payout – from the UK Government – is intended for people of state pension age with disabilities, or such serious health issues they are unable to care for themselves.

But we can reveal that Julie, 59, who lives with her husband Barry, 63, in Spain, runs a thriving business helping people game the system.

Our undercover team arranged a meeting with the former office manager as part of an investigation into our overseas benefits bill, which costs taxpayers up to £10million a year.

Julie met semi-retired war photographer Peter Jordan, 67, who does have genuine health issues including prostate cancer, which was diagnosed in April last year.

He also suffers from tinnitus, loss of smell and partial deafness after experiencing explosions in Ukraine and occasionally has a bad back, which he treats with paracetamol.

'Very honest'

Peter takes statins for his high cholesterol and is on antihistamines for a condition called globus sensation – a painless feeling of having something stuck in your throat.

He remains active and demonstrated this to Julie by getting up several times to walk around.

But by the time she finished filling out his claim, able-bodied Peter had been reduced to a child-like state incapable of being left safely on his own for more than four hours.

Peter told Julie that he could "struggle putting socks on sometimes" and gets "cramps in his hands".

Julie stated he struggled to walk independently and had difficulty standing up from a chair, climbing stairs and getting out of bed.

She also said he needed help going to the toilet along with dressing, washing, drying, shopping, cooking and cutting his food, and required constant monitoring at night.

Boasting of her near 100-per-cent success rate, Julie told our undercover team: "We've gone for the high rate [of Attendance Allowance] by saying the risk of falling, and the risk of not hearing or smelling a fire. That's not needing help on a daily basis. But we can't say when there is going to be a fire."

Our investigation was launched following a tip-off from a whistleblower who knows of expats in Spain boasting they had received full Attendance Allowance "then were dancing on a table the next day".

Julie and her hubby hand out leaflets up and down the Costa Blanca on campsites popular with Brits, which state: "Do you live in Spain and receive a UK state pension? Thousands of people are missing out on benefits they are entitled to. You could receive £60-£90 per week. Full discretion assured."

Our reporter contacted Julie, who owns static caravans in Murcia – where she lives – and Blackpool, posing as a concerned relative calling on behalf of his uncle.

Within a few minutes, she agreed to drive two hours to meet the "uncle" at a rented apartment in popular holiday resort, Benidorm.

She explained she would charge 50 Euros for filling out the form and that he would also need to pay her the first four weeks of his Attendance Allowance – which could total as much £458.40 – once the claim had been approved. The UK Government website states people of state pension age can apply to receive between £76.70 and £114.60 a week for personal support.

When Peter asked Julie what his chances of success were, she said there were only two potential issues – one, if he settled in Spain after Brexit and two, if he received an overseas pension.

Julie said: "I'm very honest with people. If I think they won't get it, I'll tell them."

But Julie – who claimed to have received training from Age Concern – exhibited a complex relationship with the truth once we sat down with her on Monday.

A detailed analysis of the claim

Claims she made on form about our undercover Sun on Sunday man

(Reality in brackets)

- Unable to cook meals (A friend sometimes takes over when he is cooking)
- Needs round-the-clock care from a friend who has a key to his flat (Friend pops round occasionally and doesn't have a key)
- Has difficulty rising from a chair and walking. Needs help getting in and out of bed, showering, and has to be taken to the toilet six times a day. (He didn't make these claims and got up several times during the interview. Said help with personal care would be 'embarrassing')

DO YOU LIVE IN SPAIN AND RECEIVE A UK STATE PENSION?

Thousands of people are missing out on benefits they are entitled to.

You could receive between £60 - £90 per week!

- Do you have a disability or illness that makes everyday tasks difficult?
- Do you rely on others for help / support?

You could be entitled to financial help from the UK whilst living in Spain.

This benefit is not means tested, so your savings or any other income will not affect your claim.

We can support you through the claims process. Full discretion assured.

form, which we photographed, and the transcript of our taped conversation shows various discrepancies.

These include Julie writing down that Peter receives round-the-clock care from a friend who helps with "shopping, support to appointments, cooking, day-to-day living and dressing".

She also said the friend was a key holder and emergency contact.

But Peter explained a friend pops round occasionally but doesn't have a key to his apartment.

She also ticked a box stating that Peter "needs help getting in and out of bed".

When Julie asked if Peter needed help with "personal care" such as toileting or showering, he replied: "No, that's a bit embarrassing."

She stated that he needs help looking after his appearance twice a day, washing and drying himself twice a day, using the shower once a day and that he needs to be taken to the loo six times a day and has difficulty rising from a chair and walking around.

None of these claims were agreed to by Peter, who repeatedly rose from his chair during the meeting.

He did mention that he occasionally used a seat when he showered, which prompted Julie to ask if he had installed grab handles. Peter joked: "That would be handy!"

Ability to exaggerate

She said: "So you're going to get them soon? I'll put that down. I'll put in brackets 'being fitted' so again we're not telling any lies."

On another section concerning meals, she wrote: "I am not safe and unable to prepare and cook meals."

This was presumably prompted by Peter saying a friend sometimes "takes over" when he is cooking.

But the gap between the conversation and the contents of the form was startling – and her ability to exaggerate ailments boundless. She also seemed adept at coaching her customers, at one point telling Peter: "Like I said, always be truthful with your answers. If you always use the lift, just say 'I don't use the stairs, I use the lift'.

"Whether you can physically climb the stairs – just say 'I always use the lift'. If you did always use the lift, you wouldn't know if you can climb the stairs because you've not tried it."

Julie concluded that Peter can only be safely left alone for between two and four hours.

Attendance Allowance is not means tested so a person's income is irrelevant – and Julie says the Department of Work and Pensions only recently started calling expats to check the validity of their claims.

Yet with the Government now blowing nearly £1BILLION a day on benefits, critics hope a crackdown is on the horizon.

Julie said Attendance Allowance is much easier to claim when a person shares a home with a friend or partner. She admitted: "It's more difficult because you live on your own.

"We've put all the difficulties you have and that you have someone on call if needed, so hopefully that will be enough."

Asked how many Attendance Allowance claims she has filled out on behalf of other people, Julie said: "It's in the hundreds, including England as well.

"I always say to people there's no point lying. You've got to be realistic with the things you are writing.

"People say to me, 'What should I write?' Then other people say, 'Oh no, I do that safely myself.' But when you get into it with them, they can't do it safely themselves – they think they can because they've just got on with it."

The taxpayer will be thankful to hear Peter has no interest in claiming and has asked for the form Julie filled out to be destroyed.

Responding to our article – and claims she has helped people play the system – Julie said: "Attendance Allowance is not just for people that receive support, it's for people that need it.

"I don't lie on forms. I put down what I actually believe. I would never make a false claim.

"I specifically state during the meeting that I wouldn't lie and I encourage them not to lie. I think I am doing this the right way."

Helen Whately, Shadow Work and Pensions Secretary, said: "This is a racket run at the taxpayer's expense. This scam takes gaming the benefits system to a new level."

The Department of Work and Pensions said: "We thank The Sun on Sunday for raising this, and whilst we cannot comment on individual allegations, we take accusations of fraud extremely seriously.

"We have zero tolerance for fraud. Where investigations show wrongdoing we will seek prosecutions."

Wife sent video of husband hanging

EXCLUSIVE by RYAN MERRIFIELD

A GRIEVING mum was accidentally emailed police bodycam footage of her husband's body hanging in a wood.

Leah Clarke received the clip from a police legal adviser before Ollie Clarke's inquest.

It arrived on March 10, 26 months after his death in Bournemouth – before which he called Leah threatening suicide.

Leah, 25, said: "When the video starts, they're in the woods. I couldn't look away . . . they just found him." She called the clip traumatising.

Next day, a follow-up email explained the video was sent in error. Another stated: "It should not have happened. I make no excuse for it."

Leah, of Derby, is now suing. Dorset Police said it would not comment as a legal claim had been launched.

An inquest jury's narrative verdict said there were missed opportunities to save Ollie, 29.

WHEN asked about retirement, Dolly said she'd prefer to "fall dead in the middle of a great song", adding: "I'll be like Bob Hope, touring when I'm 100."

Big debt to traders

SMALL traders are owed billions in unpaid invoices by some of Britain's biggest businesses, a report claims.

Two in five were paid late in the past year – nearly double the rate seen in 2023 and 2024.

Some £26billion is owed to around 2.2million small traders at any one time, small business support platform Enterprise Nation says.

Its CEO Aaron Asadi said it is time to stop punishing small firms, who boost the economy by £2.8trillion every year.

He said: "Billions in working capital is being lent, interest-free and involuntarily, by the smallest firms in the country to some of the largest."

FOREVER looking on the bright side of life, Dolly liked to say: "The way I see it, if you want the rainbow, you gotta put up with the rain."

HIGH ENERGY COSTS FORCED UK TO IMPORT 352MILLION BRICKS LAST YEAR

PROJECTS . . . Housing Secretary Angela Rayner

By BEN GRIFFITHS and KATE FERGUSON

BRICKS made in Britain are so expensive due to energy costs that construction bosses are turning to cheaper imports.

Despite the UK having around 50 brickworks in our once-envied industry, building firms are opting to buy from countries including Germany, the Netherlands and even India and Bangladesh.

Experts told The Sun on Sunday that crippling energy costs and an unpredictable pipeline of work mean brick-making kilns are continually being switched on and off. This is leading to price increases and a lack of reliability for building firms.

The latest government figures show brick imports soared by almost 12 per cent to 352million last year, with imports accounting for around 20 per cent of the UK market. Domestic production was 1.5billion, with 17million exported.

Our probe found a British-manufactured Ibstock Alderley Mixture red multi wirecut facing brick is advertised at approximately 95p per brick – £950 per 1,000. Yet an almost identical load from the EU, the ET Clay Tamworth Red Multi, is advertised at £720 per 1,000.

'This is a catastrophe'

That is a saving of £2,300 per 10,000 bricks, roughly the number needed for a three-bed house.

Planning expert Nicholas Boys Smith, MBE, who is founder and chairman of Create Streets, said: "Britain's brick industry is in trouble. High energy costs and increasingly stringent sustainability standards are making bricks more expensive and reducing demand. Some factories have already closed.

"This is a catastrophe happening in slow motion which is about to get much worse. We must act now before we murder the British brick industry."

New PM Andy Burnham has pledged to deliver 1.5million new homes by 2029, which would require 15billion bricks – and last month, Chancellor John Healey ordered government departments to "Buy British first" to help kick-start the economy.

Gareth Snell, Labour MP for Stoke-on-Trent, said: "With the Government's house-building bonanza, it should be boom time for British brick kilns.

"And because a well-made British brick will last 200 years, it's good for the environment, too.

"When compared to the diesel-chugging, tanker-imported bricks made overseas or 'sustainable' timber that has a 60-year life span, it's a no-brainer to use British bricks."

In February, Labour MP Adam Jogee introduced a Private Member's Bill pushing for the use of British-made bricks in construction projects.

He told The Sun on Sunday: "We should focus government spending on backing British businesses to boost jobs and growth."

Today construction leaders have called on the Government to slash energy costs to help keep kilns firing. Construction consultant Ian Hodgkinson said: "We have clay beneath our feet. We have brickworks. We have skilled people. We have the engineering knowledge and we have towns and cities that were built on British brickmaking.

"If it is cheaper to transport a heavy brick hundreds of miles than to make it in Britain, the problem is not the brick. It is the system surrounding it.

"It is time to put British manufacturing back at the foundation of British house-building."

In the late 1960s and early 1970s – driven by the post-war housing boom – the UK was producing 6.5 to seven billion bricks a year.

In 2022, that figure stood at two billion and by 2024 it was 1.3billion.

The 50 factories around the UK are mainly run by three companies: Ibstock, Forterra and Wienerberger.

Despite 12,000 UK workers still making bricks and tiles – and 86,000 working in the wider trade – UK production is severely down.

Ian said: "Westminster can't announce a housing target and expect brick factories to increase production the following morning.

"You cannot shut a brickworks down when demand falls and reopen it next weekend.

"Modern brickmaking is an energy-intensive process.

"The kilns operate at temperatures of around 1,000C or more. They need vast quantities of energy and must run efficiently over long cycles.

'Hodful of extra cost'

"If gas and electricity are significantly more expensive in Britain than in competing countries, the British brick begins the race with a hodful of extra cost on its back.

"Factories cannot absorb those additional costs indefinitely."

In Germany and the Netherlands, kilns are constantly on, because energy costs are low.

Ian added: "You cannot blame a builder for trying to control costs.

"If somebody is building 100 houses and can save tens of thousands of pounds on one material, they are under commercial pressure to consider it.

"The wider question is why British industrial costs and procurement practices sometimes allow a heavy product manufactured hundreds of miles away to undercut one made closer to the building site."

According to Trades Union Congress data, an average-sized industrial brickmaking factory in the UK spends approximately £1.2million to £2.5million a year on energy.

Ian, also the on-screen project manager for the BBC show DIY SOS, said: "The Government must address industrial energy costs.

"Manufacturers need an affordable and dependable energy strategy while they invest in cleaner kilns, hydrogen trials and lower-carbon production."

A government spokeswoman said: "The vast majority of bricks used in housebuilding are British, which is why we produce over four times as many bricks as we import, and we always encourage housebuilders to use British bricks."

Song . . . McCartney

Sir Paul is turtley devoted

By ELEANOR GUNN

ANIMAL lover Sir Paul McCartney has a special pet – a turtle called Terry the Terrific Terrapin.

The 84-year-old Beatle told a Q&A on his website that Terry has "no complaints, no demands and is very easy-going".

He revealed: "I peel grapes for her. She's very lucky. No one else in the world gets peeled grapes from me." Sir Paul even hinted he might write a song about Terry.

SIDE-EFFECTS OF SEX PILLS

VIAGRA MADE ME HARD OF HEARING

VIAGRA users say the drug left them deaf — while others have complained of flashing lights and drooling.

Blindness, baldness and being unable to drive are also reported side-effects.

Other gripes include a swollen tongue and confusion.

EXCLUSIVE by MATT DAVIS

They were among a total of 1,130 alleged side-effects logged with the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency in the past five years.

The most reported one was headaches, with 90 cases, followed by 34 reports of heart problems – including two fatal cardiac arrests.

Six people claimed it was linked to their hearing loss. The late Playboy tycoon Hugh Hefner went deaf in one ear after taking Viagra – but is said to have insisted he would rather be unable to hear than lose his sex life.

Two people linked the pills to the amputation of their leg.

Since 2021, the MHRA has recorded 35 deaths potentially linked to Viagra or the generic version called sildenafil. The watchdog logs reports under its Yellow Card scheme so it can give a warning if there are a spate of similar cases.

No reported side-effects were found to be definitely caused by the love drug.

A spokesman said: "Where a potential new side-effect is identified, the MHRA carefully assess the information.

"If necessary, we will take action to minimise risks."

Student loan rate debt trap

GRADUATES given student loans between 2012 and 2022 need to earn £63,000 a year before their balance decreases.

Those on less, with an average £52,100 debt, will not chisel away at it, Department for Education analysis found.

The income-related repayment rules and interest mean balances increase by £1,692 a year for graduates with a typical debt who earn a £39,039 average salary, The Times reports.

It was also predicted just 24 per cent of those on average earnings ten years after repayments kick in will be able to completely clear these Plan 2 loans, which are written off after 30 years.

Camera spy bully is caged

By BRENDAN McFADDEN

A MAN who installed a camera outside his lover's home so he could monitor her has been jailed.

Keith Bird, 54, subjected the woman to ten months of psychological abuse.

He belittled her, told her that her parents and children did not love her and made her change her phone number and delete social media accounts.

His victim said in a statement that he fitted a camera in Romford, East London, so "he could keep an eye on me".

After they split, Bird pushed her as he demanded the return of a car. The woman told the court: "I am broken."

Bird, of Tower Hamlets, East London, admitted assault and controlling behaviour. He was jailed for two years, 11 months and got a seven-year restraining order at Snaresbrook crown court.

ACTRESS ON NEW FILM TEENAGE S

SARAH ARNOLD

THE SEX FILES . . . Gillian had concerns over her raunchy new film role

Picture by MATT HOLYOAK Camera Press

SHE was once voted the sexiest woman in the world, but Gillian Anderson feared she would look "creepy" playing the on-screen lover of a woman half her age.

The X-Files actress, 58, is cast as reclusive ex-horror movie star Billy Presley in erotic slasher Teenage Sex And Death At Camp Miasma, opposite 31-year-old Hannah Einbinder.

But the dynamic made Gillian uneasy as Hannah is the same age as her real-life daughter, Piper.

She said: "It was important for me – I really didn't want for Billy to feel creepy or predatory.

"My daughter is the same age as Hannah. And so, for me, it needed to feel very purposeful and it's a fine line to walk, but it was a really important line to walk. I didn't want it to be off-putting or disturbing or weird.

"You know, that it would only be weird in the places where it was meant to be weird."

In the horror movie, which landed in UK cinemas last week, Gillian's portrayal of faded actress Billy is already generating serious Oscar buzz.

But the age-gap romance was not the only thing that played heavily on her mind during production.

She revealed that horror and slasher movies still deeply "trigger" her in real life thanks to watching a violent flick in her teens when she was high on cannabis.

She said: "One of the first times I smoked weed, I was at somebody else's house and they started watching Texas Chainsaw Massacre.

"And I had one of the worst first trips of my entire life!

Sexiest woman

"And that really dictated my relationship with horror – and weed, as a matter of fact.

"So I didn't have a big horror education, and it still triggers me a little bit.

"Slasher and horror and anything 'Saw'-like or psychological, like real psychological thriller stuff, I can't go there.

"But I'm happy to play somebody who embraces it and really leans into that level of fear around it.

"Because my experience afterwards was real horror, like feeling that horror that you can't not then dream about and gets triggered over and over and over again.

"So it's been a fun journey with my relationship with dark st!"

'The more we practise not giving a monkey's ass what anyone else thinks or says, the more we radiate a confidence that belongs to us and us alone'

Gillian's provocative new role comes three full decades after FHM mag readers voted her the Sexiest Woman In The World at the height of global X-Files mania. But in 1996, she felt her real life was anything but glamorous, previously claiming it simply "revolved around call sheets, line memorisation and motherhood".

Today, however, Gillian commands both her sexuality and her sprawling career on her own unapologetic terms.

Alongside writing her bestselling book, Want – a collection of anonymous sexual fantasies from women around the world – she has launched her cheeky "G Spot" drinks brand and taken on increasingly daring projects.

And Gillian believes that being truly sexy stems from not worrying about what others think.

She insisted the more we "practise not giving a monkey's ass what anyone else thinks or says, then the more we radiate a confidence that is for and belongs to us and us alone".

Writing in Vogue, she added: "And that's it really. The most seductive thing any of us can wear is the quiet conviction that we belong exactly where we are. Everything else is simply getting dressed."

Since finding global fame as FBI Special Agent Dana Scully on The X-Files from 1993 to 2018, Gillian has continuously subverted industry expectations to cement her status as one of her generation's most versatile stars.

She broke out of potential typecasting early on by starring as tragic socialite Lily Bart in Terence Davies' acclaimed 2000 period drama The House Of Mirth. Gillian then went on to play fan favourite sex therapist Jean Milburn in Netflix smash Sex Education from 2019 to 2023, and also transformed into PM Margaret Thatcher for The Crown in 2020.

Up next, she is due to appear in two major new shows on Netflix.

She will play a shadowy operative in high-stakes thriller Animals opposite Ben Affleck, as well as appearing in the limited series The Boys From Brazil about a holocaust survivor's crusade to bring Nazi fugitives to justice.

Most tantalizingly for sci-fi fans, Gillian is also rumoured to be appearing in the hotly anticipated upcoming X-Files remake. She backs the X Files franchise being rebooted by the Oscar-winning filmmaker behind Black Panther and Sinners, Ryan Coogler.

She adds: "A real artist like Ryan coming in to take on that franchise is such an interesting and radical concept. And kudos to our show runner Chris Carter, the creator, for allowing him to take the helm.

"It feels like he's almost a version of who Chris is, stepping in and saying, 'I know how to do this justice'."

Selecting her creative projects requires a great deal of "patience", even if Gillian openly admits to taking on a bit too much work at times.

She said: "It does take a belief that if you wait and dare to do nothing until the thing arrives, that it will come. I do have the tendency to just embrace everything.

"I just enjoy all of it. So I end up just doing too much. But yes, there is a version of me that would do less and only choose the jewels." Public obsession over The X-Files continues to burn bright and, despite her huge stardom, Gillian still attends events to meet fans of the series.

She said: "Places where I experience it sometimes are at Comic Cons. The fans' reaction doesn't feel like it's for me. So I don't feel like, 'Oh, I'm so cool'. It's more of . . . I understand from their perspective, their relationship; even though I don't understand the obsessive nature of it.

"I understand that it's important – it almost helps them define who they are.

"And I can understand why that is important for a human being, to have something to identify with and that they feel represents an aspect of their internal life, and I get that.

"And I'm happy to show up as the embodiment of that thing." Despite the ongoing hype, Gillian remains profoundly grateful that social media was not around when she was rising to global fame on The X-Files, sparing her from the intense digital scrutiny that young actors today are forced to contend with.

She added: "We were working 17, 18-hour days, and so it wasn't until we were at award shows that we were exposed to the fandom, which is very, very different today."

'It felt illicit and wrong'

Off screen, her colourful personal life has been defined by that same open and candid approach.

One of her first relationships was with an older girl at school.

She later admitted: "It felt secretive and illicit and wrong and we had to hide".

She met her first husband, Clyde Klotz, while he worked as an assistant art director on The X-Files.

The couple married in 1994 and had daughter Piper nine months later, before parting ways in 1997. Recalling her first marriage, she has said: "I got pregnant on my wedding night. How old-fashioned is that?"

In 2004, Gillian married foreign correspondent Julian Ozanne, though the union ended after 16 months.

She then started a new chapter with British businessman Mark Griffiths.

They have two sons – Oscar, 19, and Felix, 17 – but split in 2012 after six years together.

She has also reportedly been in an on-off relationship with award-winning screenwriter Peter Morgan, creator of The Crown, since 2016.

Reflecting on love, she said: "The person I consider my life partner happens to be male . . . but I think I would feel the same way if it were a woman."

That unbothered attitude extends to online casting speculation, including whether she would ever take over the cinema world's most famous spy role.

In a viral video clip posted with Elle USA, she addressed the long-running James Bond speculation with her trademark wit.

When asked for a rumour she had read about herself that she wished were true, she said: "That I'm the next James Bond. I'm kind of joking. I'd be a woman. And I wouldn't be called Jane. I wouldn't be Jane Bond. I'd still have a gun."

Then she cheekily added: "And maybe I'd still collect women."

Regardless of whether 007 execs come calling, Gillian remains supremely confident that her latest project delivers a thrilling, unforgettable cinematic experience.

She said: "I think the audience will get that from the second it starts. And it's hilarious and it's important and it's profound."

TV AND LISTINGS PULLOUT

I'VE never seen the point of a lash primer. It always seemed a waste of valuable minutes in my morning routine, until a new UKLash product made me do a U-turn. Here's how it compares to two bestsellers.

you BEAUTY

with TARA LEDDEN

budget

THE Ordinary Lash Curl Finisher Clear Mascara, £9.40 for 10ml, cultbeauty.co.uk: I can only describe this as hairspray for your lashes.

The clear formula reminds me of the clear mascara my mum bought me as a tween when I desperately begged to wear make-up before I should have been. Although, this one actually makes my lashes look longer and keeps them lifted all day after I've used a lash curler.

Unlike the UKLash product, it doesn't have a tint, so it's not one I'd wear alone, but it makes my mascara look better, which is arguably worth the extra step, especially at this price.

mid-range

UKLash Lash Lift Gel, £20 for 7ml, uklash.com: This is it, the product that made me change my mind and meant a change to my morning make-up.

The brand labels it a "lash lift in a bottle", which I'd usually take issue with, but it actually delivers.

The formula is part serum – with nourishing vitamin E, glycerin and hexapeptide – part primer, and contains a caramel dye to tint lashes over time, too. Under mascara, it helps separate lashes and ensure a lengthened, clump-free finish – but it's wearing it alone that sealed the deal.

It keeps lashes curled all day, and the tint gives just the right amount of polish so I feel put together without looking like I'm wearing make-up.

luxury

Too Faced Better Than Sex Foreplay Lash Lifting And Thickening Mascara Primer, £27 for 8ml, lookfantastic.com: The black colour makes this feels more like a mascara than a primer so why bother to spend the time (or money) applying another product on top.

It definitely makes my lashes look longer and fuller – which is great for a night out when I want added drama – but because of the pigments it can get clumpy, which is a pet peeve.

You will need an oil cleanser to remove it, something to consider if you intend to wear it regularly.

THERE have been so many great, affordable perfumes launched it's hard to keep track – but Boots' Last Note captured my attention. It's the retailer's first own-brand perfume range and each of the five scents is £12.99 for 50ml. They could be mistaken for perfumes five times the price.

Vanilla Portrait may well be the most popular, but I prefer Echoes Of You. Available in-store and at boots.com.

IF you're looking for great-value food that's also good for you, why not shell out on some eggs?

They are versatile, packed with protein and budget-friendly, too.

Today The Sun on Sunday's chef and Speedy 10 author, Amy Sheppard, has these four simple and affordable recipes that will all make tasty family meals.

Let's toast the brilliance of eggs

Sun ON SUNDAY FOOD

Steak orzo carbonara(ish)

AMY SAYS: "Not a traditional carbonara, but this still has egg, grated cheese (I use cheddar, not parmesan), orzo and paprika to give it the lovely smoky flavour you'd get from the bacon. And all topped with tasty steak. Incredible flavours and a short ingredients list make this a keeper."

Serves 4

Prep: 7 minutes
Cook: 15 minutes
YOU NEED:
50g butter
4 sirloin steaks
2 chicken stock pots
450g orzo
4 eggs (3 yolks and 1 whole egg)
80g finely grated mature cheddar
1½ tsp smoked paprika
60g fresh spinach, coarsely chopped
Salt and freshly ground pepper

METHOD: Melt half the butter in a large pan and when spitting hot add 2 of the steaks. Fry over a high heat for 3 minutes, turn and fry for another minute before lowering the heat for the final minute so the steaks are cooked medium. Repeat with the other 2 steaks.

Add the stock pots and some boiling water to a pan, add the orzo and simmer for 10 minutes, stirring occasionally so it doesn't stick to the base of the pan.

Mix yolks and whole egg with cheddar, paprika, spinach and ½ tsp black pepper.

Before draining orzo, save 100ml of the pasta stock. Return the drained orzo to saucepan, add the egg mix and 50ml starchy water. Mix until cheese is melted and spinach wilted. If needed, stir in more water a little at a time.

Divide between 4 bowls and top with steak strips.

> 'Orzo and paprika give it a lovely smoky flavour'

tips & swaps

I LOVE cooking the orzo in chicken stock, which adds so much flavour, but you can use boiling water if you prefer.

Steak is expensive, so to make this a bit cheaper, fry up 200g of finely sliced chorizo ring instead.

Cowboy butter microwave scrambles

AMY SAYS: "Before I met my husband, I would never have cooked scrambled eggs in the microwave – now it's the only way I cook them. This super-herby, flavour-packed butter takes scrambled eggs to the next level."

Serves 2

Prep: 10 minutes
Cook: 5 minutes

YOU NEED:

For the cowboy butter (makes 1 small bowl):
80g soft butter
1 tsp smoked paprika
½ tsp chilli flakes
½ tsp Dijon mustard
1 tsp finely chopped chives
1 tsp dried sage
1 tsp Worcestershire sauce

For the scrambled eggs:
3 large eggs
2 tbsp milk
15g cowboy butter
Salt and freshly ground black pepper

To serve:
Buttered toast
Chopped fresh chives

METHOD: Mash the ingredients together for the cowboy butter and store in the fridge.

Whisk the eggs in a microwaveable bowl until smooth and fluffy. Stir in the milk and 15g cowboy butter. Season and microwave for 30 seconds on high.

Microwave three more times for 30 seconds and gently whisk in between.

Make the toast and top with eggs and a little dollop of cowboy butter.

Garnish with chopped chives.

tips & swaps

FOR an extra kick of flavour, spread the cowboy butter on the toast before piling on the scrambled egg.

with AMY SHEPPARD

Maple and paprika pork egg-fried rice

AMY SAYS: "My egg-fried rice often turned into a starchy mess. Our friend Bob advised using microwave rice pouches. It isn't sloppy and doesn't stick."

Serves 4

Prep: 7 minutes
Cook: 15 minutes

YOU NEED:

For the pork:
600g pork loin steaks, cut width-ways into 2cm slices
2 tsp cornflour
2 tsp paprika
½ tsp ground cumin
½ tsp chilli powder
1 tbsp maple syrup
Salt and pepper

For egg-fried rice:
3×250g pouches microwave basmati rice
Oil, for frying

1 bunch spring onions, chopped
2 garlic cloves, finely chopped
1 tsp ginger paste
90g frozen peas
3 tbsp soy sauce, plus extra to finish
3 eggs, beaten

METHOD: Mix the pork, cornflour and spices with your hands until coated. Microwave the rice pouches.

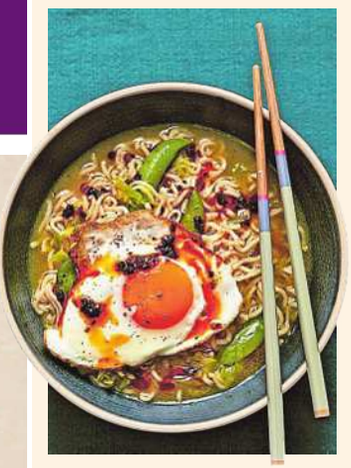
Fry the spring onions for two minutes, add the garlic, ginger paste and peas and fry for 3 minutes. In another pan, stir fry the pork for 3 minutes, until no longer pink. Add maple syrup and fry for 1 minute and set aside.

Add the cooked rice to the spring onion mix. Add soy sauce and mix over a medium heat.

Make a well in the centre of the rice so the base of the pan is visible. Pour in the eggs. When it starts to cook around the edges, work into the rice until some bits of cooked egg are visible. Divide between 4 bowls, add a splash of soy sauce, top with the pork and some of the meat juices. Garnish with coriander.

tips & swaps

FOR a veggie option, add an extra egg and a pouch of rice, plus fried peppers, courgettes, bamboo shoots and carrots instead of pork.



Curried happy noodles and fried egg

AMY SAYS: "When I first left home I lived in a shared house in Bristol. A corner shop sold packets of curry-flavour instant noodles for 10p, which I would put in a buttered white bread sandwich. Grown-up Amy makes her own ten-minute version with veggies and an egg on the side."

Serves 4

Prep: 5 minutes
Cook: 15 minutes

YOU NEED:
Oil, for frying
1 bunch spring onions, chopped
100g sugar snap peas
1 tbsp medium curry powder
1 tbsp plain flour
3×85g packets instant ramen noodles
750ml hot chicken stock
4 eggs
Chilli oil

METHOD: Heat a glug of oil in a frying pan. Add the spring onions and sugar snap peas and fry for 3 minutes.

Stir in the curry powder and flour and fry for 1 minute, until the flour has been absorbed.

Put the ramen noodles in a bowl and cover with boiling water. Leave them to soak and gently separate – about 3 minutes. Use a fork to gently pull them apart. When the noodles are firm, drain them.

Slowly add the hot chicken stock, a little at a time, to the pan of vegetables.

Stir until it thickens and comes to the boil each time before adding more stock. Season with salt and pepper. Add the noodles, simmer over a low heat for 1 minute then remove from the heat.

In another pan, add a glug of oil and break the eggs into the pan then put the lid on. Fry for 2-3 minutes, or until the whites are cooked and there is a thin film over the yolks. Divide the noodles between 4 bowls. Top each one with an egg, seasoning and a drizzle of chilli oil.

UNMARRIED 'BREAK-UP TAX'

UNMARRIED couples could face a "break-up tax", where an ex has a claim to some of the other party's money or property despite never having married.

The Government has just closed a consultation on the plan.

Nearly half of Britons believe that living together for years gives the same rights as marriage. In reality, couples have almost no automatic legal protection if things go wrong.

But under the new plans, if a couple who have lived together for three years break up and it leaves one partner unable to afford basic living costs, courts could order money, property or even a slice of their ex's pension to be handed over.

The couple could only avoid this if both partners had previously agreed to opt out of the process.

Domestic abuse charities have welcomed the move, as financial dependence can trap victims in dangerous relationships.

Sam Smethers, of Surviving Economic Abuse, called it a "once-in-a-generation opportunity to change the lives of victim-survivors". But critics disagree. Baroness Ruth Deech said: "Many people choose not to marry because they value both companionship and financial independence. They should remain free to make that choice."

Barrister Katharine Bundell said the plan "does increase the risk to the financially stronger party".

But Yael Selig, at Osbornes Law, said: "The law currently gives cohabiting couples very little protection if they separate."

LOW-PAY PENSIONS BOOST

HMRC is writing to a million low-paid workers who may have missed out on pension top-ups.

Employees who pay into a personal pot usually benefit from basic-rate tax relief at source.

But many workplace pensions take contributions from wages before income tax.

Under auto-enrolment, people earning at least £10,000 a year may be enrolled in a workplace fund even if they don't earn enough to pay income tax.

If their scheme uses relief at source, low earners still receive a government top-up. But if it takes contributions from their wages then they miss out on relief because reducing their taxable income does not cut their tax bill.

Ministers have decided workers should be able to claim back cash.

The taxman began sending out the letters this month, with the scheme continuing into early next year.

Around three quarters of those affected are thought to be women, and payments could start landing in the next few months.

The payouts could be around £53 a year but it will depend on pension contributions.

HMRC will contact eligible people about the 2024/25 tax year first, before setting up an automated system to cover future years.

Steve Webb, of pension consultants LCP, said: "It is clearly unfair that around one million low earners have missed out on pension tax relief, simply because of the way in which their workplace pension is administered."

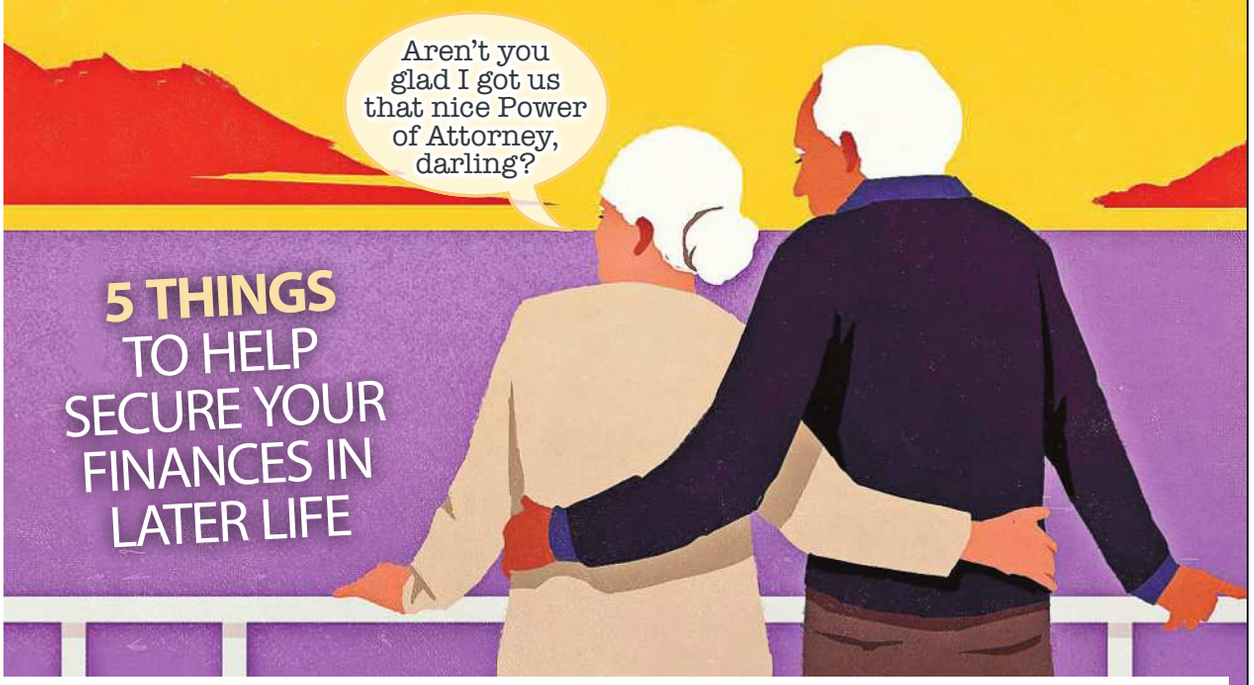
Olden years



KEEPING your finances in check during your golden years is crucial.

Firstly, you need to make sure you do not run out of cash, then you may want to leave some behind for the family.

On top of that, there are tax traps to avoid.

HOLLY THOMAS shares her later-life checklist to boost savings and keep the taxman at bay . . .

BOOST CASH BY £10,000s

IT'S easy to forget an old pension plan or savings account.

In just the first half of this year, roughly £2.5billion worth of unclaimed savings was returned to customers by firms including JP Morgan and Standard Life – an average of £31,647 per person.

Use sites Gretel and My Lost Account to check for lost money.

Coming up to retirement? Check you have filled in any gaps in your National Insurance record, which is used by the Government to calculate how much state pension you get. Each missing year can cost you around £350 annually.

Check if you can fill in gaps for free with National Insurance credits. These could be available if, for example, you were unable to work while looking after children.

See if you can claim Pension Credit, which tops up your weekly state pension to a minimum of £238 for single people and £363.25 for couples. It also unlocks other benefits such as council tax discounts and a free TV licence if you are 75 or above.

BUY AN ANNUITY

AN annuity is a financial product that gives you a guaranteed income for life. Many people buy one using their pension.

They are great if you want peace of mind over your finances and do not fancy the hassle of managing a pension.

Now is a good time to buy one as rates have improved in recent months, which means you get a better income.

Someone who bought an annuity with a £50,000 pension pot in March would get £3,547 a year. Now, it would bag you £3,653 – £106 more.

If you are worried about leaving your spouse with no cash, you could consider a joint-life annuity so your partner continues to get payments after your death. Keep in mind that you will get less cash per year to live on.

Someone who bought a joint-life annuity now with a £50,000 pension pot would get around £3,300 a year.

CLEVER TAX TRICK

MAKE the most of your Isa, which shelters cash you earn from investments or interest from the taxman. You can currently save up to £20,000 into an Isa each year. From April 2027, that figure drops to £12,000 for cash Isas if you are under 65. You will still be able to invest up to £20,000 into a stocks and shares Isa. When you die, your spouse can see their Isa allowance given a one-off boost equal to the value of your Isa. So if you had £2,000 in your Isa, your spouse's allowance would go up by £2,000 for one year.

POWER OF ATTORNEY

SETTING up a Lasting Power of Attorney allows you to choose someone you trust to make important decisions for you if you are no longer able to.

There are two kinds – one for financial decisions and one for health and welfare. They cost £92 each. A financial one will let your chosen person pay your bills, collect your pension and sell your house, for example.

The health and welfare one will allow them to arrange your care and make decisions over medical treatment.

You can fill the forms out yourself at gov.uk/power-of-attorney. But follow the instructions carefully or you may have to repeat the process – and pay again.

A solicitor can do it for you but will charge around £400 to £800.

If you don't have one and lose mental capacity, your family will have to apply for a "deputyship" through the courts, which can be a lengthy and complicated process. Applying to be a deputy costs £432. If the court decides you need a hearing, you will need to pay an extra £266.

LEAVE FINANCES SHIP SHAPE

WHEN you die, it is up to your loved ones to sift through your finances and pay off any bills or debts from your estate.

This is called "death admin", and research shows four out of five people find it difficult.

A few simple steps now can save your family from stress and confusion during a difficult time.

Firstly, make a will. A DIY will can cost as little as £25 but if you get a solicitor to help it could be more like £200 to £300. Next, compile a list of all your accounts and savings and the provider names and account numbers.

Include information needed for your loved ones to access your online bills and banking.

List any life insurance, investments and pension plans, along with names of the companies they are held with and account numbers. Gather property deeds and DVLA paperwork for cars.

If you have debts, list loan agreements so that your family can easily see what needs dealing with.

Find a secure space to store all this information and tell a trusted person where to find it.

STAR of the WEEK

MILO the Chihuahua-cross is an honorary staff receptionist at the Elfordleigh Hotel in Plympton, Devon.

The 12-year-old works alongside his owner, Samantha Chambers, though he can often be found taking naps.

Samantha, 49, said: "Milo is a friendly face to all of our visitors and four-legged guests who come to the hotel.

"He's a very much-loved member of the staff team too, but he does have a habit of snoozing on the job."

While Samantha has worked at the hotel for 25 years, Milo is a relative newbie, having been behind the reception desk for a year. Samantha added: "Instead of a salary he gets plenty of his favourite chicken dog treats."

EMMA THE CAT SO NOSEY

MY cat Emma is really timid around people, yet she likes to nose around people's homes.

If she gets spotted she runs. Is this why there's the old adage curiosity killed the cat? Are cats really nosey creatures?

JANET DALE, Sevenoaks, Kent

■ Sean says: Cats are wonderfully contradictory creatures. Emma may be shy around people but that doesn't stop her being endlessly curious.

Exploring neighbouring houses offers new smells, warm sofas and perhaps the occasional neighbour willing to hand out treats. The moment she's spotted, her cautious side takes over and she retreats to safety.

If you'd rather she kept her adventures closer to home, enriching your own garden with climbing shelves, hiding places and interactive play can help satisfy some of her inquisitiveness. It doesn't have to be expensive. Good old cardboard boxes will often do the trick.

I HAVE a two-year-old rescue dog, Willow, and his nails are getting long.

He just doesn't want me to clip them. What do you advise?

He's a husky-cross and he gets very dramatic.

SIMON JONES, Birmingham

■ Sean says: Huskies do have a reputation for being rather theatrical, let's say, so I wouldn't be surprised if Willow behaves as though you're attempting major surgery when you produce the nail clippers.

Don't try to do all four paws in one heroic session. Start by touching his paws and rewarding him, then gradually introduce the clippers without actually cutting anything.

Once he's relaxed, clip one nail and stop. Build up very slowly. A good groomer or vet nurse can also show you how to do it safely, particularly if his nails are very long.

Please don't wrestle him into submission, that can turn a dislike into a full phobia.

HOW do I stop my Labrador-cross Mylo begging at dinner time?

It started when the kids were young and he would hoover up anything dropped. He's a gentle soul and has never tried to take food from hands.

I don't want to put Mylo out of the room but he looks at me with sad eyes and I want to encourage that behaviour to stop. Should I try licky mats or a bone? If I feed him at the same time, he gobbles his meal up and is straight back to the dinner table.

KATE CLARK, Newcastle

■ Sean says: Those Labrador eyes should come with a warning. Mylo isn't being naughty, he's simply repeating a behaviour that's paid off handsomely over the years.

Instead, give him something far more exciting before you sit down. A stuffed Kong, long-lasting chew, snuffle mat or licky mat in his bed can keep him occupied while you eat.

If he does wander over, guide him back without eye contact or conversation. Everyone needs to stick to the same rules, because one dropped chip can undo a week's training.

MY cat Britney has a large pouch that swings under her and makes her look pregnant.

It doesn't bother her but is very noticeable. Should I be concerned?

DAVID HUGHES, Stafford

■ Sean says: It sounds like a primordial pouch, which is a perfectly normal flap of loose skin and fat found on many cats. It protects the abdomen during fights and gives extra flexibility when running and jumping.

As long as Britney is healthy, maintaining a sensible weight and the swelling feels soft and symmetrical, there's usually nothing to worry about.

SOMETHING SMELLS OFF WITH CAT OWNERS

AS cat owners return from their holidays, many are given the cold shoulder from their pets – and the reason has been revealed.

An expert says they are not trying to punish us, it is actually just down to how we SMELL.

Daniel Warren-Cummings, senior behaviour engagement manager at Cats Protection, said: "Cats rely on smell and sound for a sense of security. When you return after travelling through airports, hotels and taxis, your personal scent is buried under a layer of strange odours."

But he explained that it resolves after a shower and being in home surroundings.

Daniel added: "It's natural to feel a pang of remorse when you close the door and see your cat watching you leave.

"Our pets are central to our lives, so the thought of them feeling abandoned and confused while we're away can be tough.

"Understanding that cats are creatures of habit and view our absence through the lens of routine, rather than emotional rejection, can help owners enjoy a break without guilt."

ARIES March 21 – April 20

You've got so much going on, with visitors popping in, and lifts here and there, but remember that family comes first. A house or property matter that's been going on for a long time is almost finished and an educational choice becomes self-evident. You're free to do whatever you want today so get out there.

TAURUS April 21 – May 21

You can do well with a health and fitness routine but if the hard part is getting started, push yourself and soon you'll love it. The Moon moves into your sign on the 1st and makes you determined to deal with someone dragging their feet on a project. If workmen are involved, that's straight talk about money.

GEMINI May 22 – June 21

There's not a mean bone in your body so give up, you'll never understand someone's tight hold on money. And think twice before going on holiday together! On the 3rd, the Moon joins rebel Uranus in your sign, disrupting overseas travel, but as a Gemini, you'll adapt and you may end up with something better.

CANCER June 22 – July 22

Being work-free on a Bank Holiday would feel better if your family stopped bickering about where to go. With so many ideas, you and a partner will have to decide. Catch up with distant friends, especially those who make pots, pies or baskets – it's worth the drive to talk with those who are involved.

LEO July 23 – August 23

Money isn't growing on trees but spare cash for a one-off buy boosts your spirits. And when your organising talent is appreciated at work a step up the ladder is mooted. Friends into an alternative lifestyle show you more of their world. Accept an invite to an event or activity. It's an eye-opener – and lots of laughs.

VIRGO August 24 – September 22

You love it when life goes to plan, but for close friends, an emotional situation is difficult. Support them in practical ways. Your love of learning never stops and you'll be tempted by autumn courses. Check out what's on locally but if a weekend on something you love is happening abroad, think seriously about it.

LIBRA September 23 – October 23

A social gathering has edge if people don't get along but make the most of it. Use your Libran charm to keep things friendly. A partner is fearless about a new venture but you're not so convinced about future success. Look for any sign where something isn't what it appears to be and flag it up, pronto.

SCORPIO October 24 – November 22

Keep your cool, Scorpio. Your planet go-getter Mars is up against brick-wall Saturn so nothing happens quickly, especially with legal, travel or health matters. A friend with expert knowledge is a big help. Now is a good time to think about career, not simply your job. Your ambition for something better is stirring.

SAGITTARIUS November 23 – December 21

Summer ending feels like a chapter closing but a new one is opening, especially with kids and your own creative activities. An older child wants to do things their way so let them. A partner has your back and is keen on a last-minute get away. Even if it's only a few days, any adventure gives you food for thought.

CAPRICORN December 22 – January 20

Benefits come your way, and you don't have to do a thing. You set it all up long ago. If property is involved, disagreements among family members can be sorted if you act generously. Putting up visitors at your place is tricky but you'll muddle along. Catching up on their news and reminiscing is heart-warming.

AQUARIUS January 21 –February 18

Speaking in public is scary if you're not used to it but you need to get attention for a good cause. Whether it's animal welfare or prison reform, take a deep breath and speak from the heart. Your sincerity wins through. A relative tries not to complain about health so watch for any changes he or she is going through.

PISCES February 19 – March 20

Health is high on your list of priorities so make sure you aren't getting stressed. At home, getting everyone to do their share of household chores makes life easier. As a Pisces, film and photography fascinate you and your planet, image-making Neptune, is prominent now. Get on your phone and make videos.

Q&A

Send your questions to motors@the-sun.co.uk

Q MY daughter passed her driving test and is going to buy a car. She has a budget of £4,000 to £5,000, Could you please advise any cars with a reliable automatic gearbox?

PAUL METCALF

A With older automatics, it tends to be Asian manufacturers who are best at reliability – so look at Japanese cars, such as the Toyota Yaris or Honda Jazz, or Korean models, like the Hyundai i20 or Kia Rio.

You can go smaller, even, with a Toyota Aygo, Hyundai i10 or Kia Picanto.

Q LIKE many, I have a Ford Puma with the dreaded steering knock. Mine is a 2024 ST170 with less than 9,000 miles on the clock and has been fully serviced by Ford. My local dealership says it might just need the column lubricating, for £126 labour, but it's not covered under warranty. I know this is a common fault, why will Ford not recall?

STUART GROOM

A It's a difficult one, and you outline that other owners have had much more work done than simply oiling the steering column – so I can't say swallow the £126 and move on from it. I also understand it is frustrating that it isn't covered by the warranty or that Ford will issue a recall, although as the latter are only mandated when the vehicle presents a safety risk, a knocking noise is not enough to trigger one.

I feel for you, but I don't know what you can do, short of kicking up a stink at the dealer to see if you can get the work for free, or taking the car to another garage for a second opinion.

Q WHAT would the original UK Honda Civic Type R be worth now? It's a 2003 car and has done more than 100,000 miles, but it's in good condition and drives well.

BILLY KNIGHT

A These 'bread van' Type Rs, known as the 'EP3', are still holding strong money. If it's minty, then I reckon it might be worth seven grand. But as it's an older car, the mileage is higher, so I'm going to say it is worth £5,000-£6,000.

READER'S CAR OF THE WEEK

SOMETHING a bit different this week – reader Leslie Cole wants to track down this glorious Porsche kit car, looking like a 356, which he built and had to sell through ill health.

He says: "I built this and loved it, but epilepsy stopped me driving, so I sold it. I'd love to know where it is now. I've looked on the DVLA and it's off the road somewhere.

"It would be a lot to buy it back, even if the owner would sell, but I do miss it."

So come on, readers – do you know where this car is? Email me on the address below.

LITTLE car specialist Suzuki is sending its SMALLEST car our way.

The Japanese call them "Kei" cars, pronounced K.

You can see millions of them pinballing around Tokyo but for some reason they have never been sold outside of Japan until now.

Suzuki's electric eSky, right, measures just 3.4 metres long and has a 64hp motor yet comfortably seats four adults.

The first boatload arrives early next year.

Honda is doing something similar with Super N but that's a little longer and has more power than the micro cars are allowed in Japan.

VITAMIN C

VIRIDAN'S Viridikid Vitamin C drops come from the acerola cherry, which is so rich in vitamin C it can contain roughly 30 times more per 100g than an orange.

It's a natural source of the immunity-boosting vitamin which reduces tiredness, helps formation of bones and teeth and protects cells from oxidative stress. The cherries from Brazil are freeze-dried, added to organic glycerine from coconut, and mixed with orange oil for a great flavour.

Mix it into smoothies or juices or just have off the spoon. It's very sweet.

Sun ON SUNDAY

By LUCY GORNALL

WE can all get that light-headed feeling when we get up too quickly.

Most of the time it's harmless. But would you know when a bout of dizziness is something you must seek medical attention for?

If it happens regularly, it might point to something else going on inside your body.

Dr Natasha Fernando, Medical Director at Medichecks, tells Sun Health: "When you stand up suddenly, gravity causes blood to pool briefly in the legs.

"In a healthy system, your heart and blood vessels compensate almost instantly by increasing heart rate and tightening blood vessels to maintain blood flow to the brain.

"When this is delayed or insufficient, the brain receives less blood and oxygen, and you feel dizzy, like you might faint."

But, frequent dizziness shouldn't be ignored as it could indicate one of these problems . . .

LOW BLOOD PRESSURE

DIZZINESS could be a sign of low blood pressure or a symptom of other conditions.

Dr Samantha Wild, Women's Health Clinical Lead, Bupa Health Clinics, says: "It could be Parkinson's or heart issues, or the result of taking certain medications.

"Lifestyle, such as being dehydrated, drinking alcohol or using recreational drugs, as well as being too hot or cold, can also lead to lower blood pressure."

It can strike at any age, but it's more likely from age 50. You might also feel sick and have blurry vision.

If you're between 40 and 74, you should have your blood pressure checked at least once every five years as part of the free NHS health check.

Dr Wild adds that most of the time, low blood pressure can be managed by increasing fluid and salt intake, wearing compression socks and eating small but regular meals.

TABLET SIDE EFFECTS

SOME medications can contribute to light-headedness.

Examples include blood pressure medications such as diuretics and beta-blockers, some antidepressants and medications that cause dehydration or vasodilation (widening of the blood vessels), says Anthony Freestone, St John Ambulance's Associate Clinical Director.

Sedatives, sleeping tablets and some antihistamines can also cause dizziness. "These medications can sometimes lower blood pressure when standing, leading to dizzy symptoms," he says.

"If symptoms occur, patients should not stop medication abruptly but should speak to their GP."

DEHYDRATION

IF your fluid intake is low, the volume of blood circulating around your body drops.

"With less blood volume, your blood pressure can fall, especially when you stand up, meaning less blood reaches the brain briefly, which can trigger light-headedness or even fainting," says Dr Wild.

The NHS says adults should drink between 1.5 and 2.5 litres of fluids each day, depending on your lifestyle, and no-sugar drinks including tea and coffee count.

Even mild dehydration, which can cause thirst and a headache, can cause dizziness.

"This is particularly true if you're hot, have been exercising, have had alcohol or are prone to low blood pressure," says Dr Wild.

If you've been vomiting or had diarrhoea, your chances of dehy-

When to call 999

SOMETIMES your dizzy spells require urgent help. Dr Fernando says: "Call 999 or visit A&E if you experience a loss of consciousness, especially with no warning or recovery that is slow, chest pain or tightness alongside dizziness, sudden severe headache described as the worst of your life, weakness or numbness down one side of the face or body, slurred speech or confusion, palpitations with a very fast, slow or irregular heartbeat, and/or dizziness after a head injury." She adds that it could be an underlying problem such as a heart rhythm issue (an arrhythmia) or heart failure.

SUPERFOOD

IMAGINE getting a child to eat 50mg each of spirulina, barley grass, spinach, broccoli, chlorella, moringa and wheatgrass, plus 100mg each of apple and pineapple powders in one sitting – and enjoy it.

Impossible, right? Well, I thought so too until I got my seven-year-old to try LittleVitz Kids Super Greens.

It's a chocolate-flavoured powder you mix with milk, and it contains 13 vitamins plus calcium, iron and magnesium, alongside more than 20 fruit, vegetable and greens ingredients. There are no added nasties and there are decent amounts of vitamins.

It's for kids over three and especially useful if you've got a fussy eater. Developed and made in the UK.

GUMMIES

TONIC Health Kids Multivitamin Gummies are great because – unlike many others on the market – they are free from added sugar and artificial sweeteners, with beetroot fibre used for sweetness instead.

And they taste lovely with a wonderful strawberry flavour. Plus they're vegan, which many gummies aren't.

Two gummies provide 12 vitamins and minerals plus 3g of fibre.

They also contain decent amounts of the vitamins.

I especially like the fact there's 10µg of vitamin D3 which is in line with NHS guidance for children aged one and over.

If you're looking for a multivitamin to give your child on the go, these are great.

dration are higher too. The doctor adds: "A simple way to gauge hydration is to look at your urine. Pale, straw-coloured suggests you're well hydrated."

LOW IRON

EVER consider your iron levels?

"Iron plays a crucial role in helping your blood carry oxygen around the body," says Dr Wild.

"If your iron levels are low, less oxygen reaches these tissues, which can leave you feeling tired, weak, short of breath, dizzy or light-headed."

These are the symptoms of iron-deficiency anaemia. "Women are more likely to experience low iron levels," Dr Wild explains.

"When periods are heavy, the body may lose more iron than it can replace through diet, which raises the chance of feeling dizzy."

If a blood test detects low iron, you may be told to eat more iron-rich foods such as red meat, beans, lentils and leafy green vegetables such as spinach.

"Improve iron absorption by including vitamin C-rich foods alongside iron sources and/or take iron supplements if advised by a health professional," she adds.

BLOOD SUGAR LEVELS

CHANGES in blood sugar levels can cause dizziness.

It's more common in people with diabetes, especially if meals are missed, alcohol is drunk or medication doses are not balanced with food intake.

"Blood sugar can contribute to light-headedness, particularly when levels drop too low," says Anthony.

Dr Fernando adds: "Equally, very high blood sugar in people with undiagnosed or poorly controlled diabetes can cause dizziness, blurred vision and dehydration."

To prevent blood sugars rising and dropping rapidly, Anthony says: "Eat regularly and keep meals balanced by including complex carbohydrates (brown rice, oats, wholemeal bread) and protein (meat, fish, eggs, tofu)."

Reduce high-sugar, ultra-processed foods, which can cause big spikes in blood sugar.

If you are diabetic and feel dizzy, check your blood glucose level and follow your management plan, says Dr Fernando.

Clench your bum to stop dizziness

WHEN dizziness strikes, sit down and use the muscle-clenching hack.

"You can encourage your blood pressure to rise by drinking water and clenching your bum and tummy muscles," says Dr Wild.

This acts a little like a muscle "pump", helping push blood back towards the heart and supporting circulation.

"Cross your thighs and make tight fists too," says Dr Wild.

If you feel dizzy while standing, cross your legs like scissors.

Expert advice from Dr Zoe Williams, our resident specialist and NHS GP

Q I READ one of your recent columns and identified with the reader who gets leg and foot cramps several times a night. These have plagued me in my later years – I've just entered my 90th year – but I have found a way to beat them.

The trick is to stand up, or get out of bed, and with straight legs put all the weight (while holding on to something) on to the problem foot. It forces the foot skeleton to adopt its natural shape and the muscles or tendons to relax.

A Thank you for sharing this – and congratulations on entering your 90th year.

Your tip makes good sense. When cramp affects the foot or shin, the muscles can pull the toes, arch or foot into an awkward position.

Standing carefully, with support, and putting weight through the foot can help stretch the muscles and encourage the foot back into a more natural shape.

For calf cramp, a similar principle applies: Gently pulling the toes up towards the shin, or standing and leaning forwards with the heel down, can help lengthen the cramped muscle.

The important word is "carefully". Anyone who is unsteady, frail, dizzy or at risk of falls should avoid jumping out of bed suddenly in the dark.

Sit up first, use a light, hold on to something stable, and only stand if safe. Sometimes the simplest physical measures are the most effective.

Night cramps can happen for many reasons.

Triggers include dehydration, overexertion, prolonged sitting, alcohol, some medicines and low or abnormal levels of salts such as magnesium, calcium or potassium. But it can also be related to circulation problems, nerve irritation, thyroid problems, diabetes and kidney issues.

I told the last reader, who was getting cramps almost every hour, to check if blood tests were needed.

SET SQUARE

	×	3	÷		= 12
−		+		×
	+		−		= 11
+		+		÷
	−		÷	1	= 2

Sun SAKURO 1

Enter the numbers 1 to 9 in the spaces so that the number in each octagon is equal to the sum of its four surrounding squares. Each coloured area should add up to the colour totals below.

FAMILY FORUM

Dear Deidre

VISITING Australia this year was a dream come true but now my boyfriend has been offered an amazing job out there and I feel so torn.

We are both approaching 40 and have two sons, seven and five. I know the outdoor lifestyle would be brilliant for all of us but every time I think about going I feel a mixture of excitement and guilt.

My mum has been such a big part of our sons' lives and they have a really close bond.

We'd be destroying that.

Mum and Dad are in their mid-sixties and are both in good shape – for now – but what happens when they start to get frail and more dependent on me?

I'm their only child and it feels so selfish to take their only grandchildren away and leave them to their own devices just before they start to age.

My boyfriend isn't particularly close to his parents and has two older brothers so knows they will be able to step in.

He isn't particularly supportive and keeps telling me that we'll have a much better life in Australia.

I know he's right but that doesn't solve my dilemma.

He needs to let the recruiter know within four weeks if he wants to take the role or not. He's a nurse, and this job would be a promotion, so I understand why he's keen.

He wants to start telling our family soon about our decision but I don't feel ready to take that step.

What should I do?

■ DEIDRE SAYS: Certainly, Australia is a long way to get back to the UK when you need to, but that possible scenario is a long way off.

There are so many outcomes but unless you give it a go, you'll never know if it was a good move.

Take a step at a time, talk to your family and explain what is worrying you.

If you do go through with the move, your parents could visit for a month or two every year, and you could be creating the best experiences for all of you.

And don't forget, you can always move back if it doesn't work out.

Ask your boyfriend to be patient and explain you will feel happier if you can secure your parents' support.

hot topic

THERE are many reasons why people self-harm, but often it is linked to overwhelming emotional distress. When feelings become difficult to process or communicate, self-harm can seem like a way to release some of that pain or regain a sense of control.

It can involve cutting, burning, scratching, hitting or taking harmful substances.

If you're struggling, or worried about someone close to you, my support pack, Understanding Self-harm, can help.

JENNA'S IMPOSSIBLE SECRET: FINAL DAY

Dear Jenna ADAM'S angry reaction is understandable. He's only just learned about Lucy's cheating and will be feeling incredibly let down.

Give him space to process her infidelity and then perhaps write him a message explaining that you tried to persuade her to come clean.

Reassure him that you thoroughly disapproved and let her know. Once he understands this wasn't a case of the two of you laughing behind his back, he will hopefully appreciate your position.

And as for Lucy, you can encourage her to build up her own self-esteem so her head isn't turned so easily. Let her know that if she ever puts you in a similar position again you'll find it very hard to support her.

My support pack, Standing Up For Yourself, should help you find the words. Deidre

Clothes by boohoo and boohooMAN

Dear Deidre

MY dad has remarried, and while I'm happy that he has someone to share his life with, I can't stand my new stepsister.

I'm 23, an only child and still live at home. Dad is 55.

He moped around for four years after mum left him and then joined an online dating site and met his new wife. I really like her but her daughter, who is a year older than me, has latched on to Dad.

She never knew her own father and it's as if she is desperate to acquire mine.

I think Dad feels bad for her as she isn't very confident. Last Christmas we got the same gifts from him – a gold bracelet each – which annoyed me.

I don't want to be mean but I can't cope when I know she is coming to stay.

■ DEIDRE SAYS: It is a big adjustment becoming part of a blended family, especially as you will be used to having your dad to yourself.

Your stepsister sounds keen to fit in. Rather than see her as a threat, try to see her as company for you also.

My support pack, Blended Families, will help.

Dear Deidre

WHEN my new girlfriend declared she was going to ride me like a cowgirl, I really enjoyed it. But five months on, I now realise this is more than a phase.

She only wants sex if she can go on top. The only variation is whether she is facing me or my feet, in the reverse cowgirl position. It has become monotonous.

Also, I seem to "fall out of her" more in this position and sometimes she lands heavily on me. I've read this can damage the penis.

Should I tell her she needs to stop?

■ DEIDRE SAYS: It's true that the reverse cowgirl position is responsible for the most penile fractures. As you are concerned this may happen to you, it is time to talk and suggest a compromise.

It is very one-sided to only ever have sex in her favoured positions. A good sexual relationship is all about strong communication.

It's important to be able to express your concerns and give your girlfriend the opportunity to show she cares.

My support pack, How To Have Great Sex, will help.

Mechanic lover is giving me a full service

Dear Deidre

WHEN I took my car in for repairs, my husband warned me not to let the local garage rip me off.

Little did he know the mechanic there would be ripping my clothes off within weeks.

I'm a 45-year-old woman, and although my husband is a good man, I'm not sure that I like or love him any more.

He's three years older than me and is very successful. He's a senior manager for a big medical supplies business and has provided a good living for our family.

We have one son who is 16 and my husband constantly barks orders at him and puts him down. I run a small online craft business and my husband is forever being snide about it.

I think being the big boss has gone to his head and he doesn't know how to adjust at home.

I didn't set out to cheat, but when the mechanic started chatting to me, I felt strangely alive.

He was so funny and attentive, and I left the garage feeling like I was walking on air.

When I went to pick up my car the next day he asked if I fancied a drink.

I wear a wedding ring, so he knew I was married, but neither of us acknowledged that.

We met for a drink a few evenings later and had a great couple of hours.

The next time we met, I told my husband I was staying with a friend overnight after her fiftieth birthday party.

We went back to my mechanic's flat and I had the best sex of my life. Neither of us wants anything serious. We are enjoying regular hook-ups, but I fear that we'll get discovered.

My husband has recently booked his car into the same garage for an MOT and I am increasingly uneasy.

■ DEIDRE SAYS: This fling is a distraction from the growing disconnection you feel in your marriage. Your husband may be arrogant but he doesn't deserve to be cheated on.

You are right to worry that your secret may be discovered, which would set off a destructive chain reaction. Better to put an end to this affair and work through your marital issues, otherwise you risk losing your family.

Talk to him about how his dismissive attitude towards you leaves you feeling undervalued and outline your concerns around the way he treats your son.

If you can't make headway, it's better to think about whether your marriage has run its course rather than complicating life with an affair.

Dear Deidre

DID I TAKE ADVANTAGE OF MY WIFE?

SEEING my teenage daughter develop and go out on dates has made me question the age-gap relationship I have with my wife.

I'm 42 and my wife is eight years younger. We met when she was 16.

The attraction between us was intense and we couldn't keep our eyes off each other.

She came to work at the garden centre where I worked during the holidays and she lit up my world.

It was obvious that we both liked each other and everyone at work joked about us being like a married couple.

At the time, I thought I was doing the right thing by waiting until she was 17 to ask her out.

In the back of my mind I didn't want to be seen as a cradle snatcher.

She was really mature for her age, both in looks and character, and seemed far more self-assured than most women my age. Once we started dating our relationship developed quickly. And we married when she was 19.

I've always been proud of her, not just because she is good-looking but because I respect her opinions, too.

A few of my friends teased me about having a much younger wife, but the age gap never really became an issue in my mind.

That is until our daughter turned 15 recently. She loves nothing more than getting all made up and going out with her friends.

She's the image of her mother and although she looks like she could be in her early twenties, I know how young and naive she is. It's been making me question my whole marriage – and my own character.

My daughter is only a year younger than my wife was when I met her.

I'm tortured by the thoughts that I took advantage of a vulnerable teenager all those years ago.

I'm so upset, but I haven't been able to talk to anyone about this.

■ DEIDRE SAYS: You will feel a lot happier when you talk to someone about this – and preferably that person would be your wife.

It's true that an eight-year age gap is huge when the youngest partner is only 16, and as a 24-year-old you will have had a lot more life experience than your wife.

Times and attitudes are changing but it sounds like you have always treated her respectfully and can enjoy a clear conscience.

It's when the older partner – usually male – tries to control or manipulate the younger partner that there is a particular problem.

VINTAGE boat fans should set sail for London this autumn as St Katharine Docks prepares to host its largest Classic Boat Festival to date.

Taking place on September 12 and 13, visitors will be able to take a close-up look at over 70 vessels as well as gorge on special menus from local restaurants and browse pop-up stores.

Among the old world vessels on display will be Dunkirk Little Ships – a fleet of private boats, commercial vessels and small craft that sailed to rescue Allied soldiers – WW2 classics, wooden sailing barges and restored narrowboats from the 1930s.

There will also be talks from yachting journalist Tom Cunliffe.

The star of the show will be Guide of Dunkirk that has been carefully restored. See skdocks.co.uk/visit for more.

JET2 is reminding holidaymakers travelling with e-cigarettes and power banks that they must be placed in hand luggage only.

The devices also have to be turned off during flights and packaged securely.The new rules apply to all lithium battery products, which are barred from being placed in the hold.

Customers should also ensure that these items are not damaged as faulty items will not be permitted on board due to safety risks.

BEWARE DODGY QR CODES

TRAVELLERS should be cautious when scanning QR codes abroad.

Following a BBC documentary highlighting the risks of fraudulent QR codes, Booking.com is urging tourists to double-check websites after scanning codes.

According to research conducted by the holiday site, a quarter of us admit to lowering our guard when travelling abroad, and this temptation to "switch off" has led to one in eight of us falling victim to a scam.

On top of fake QR codes, the most common holiday scams include fake souvenirs, dodgy customer service contacts and counterfeit attraction tickets.

On average, Brits have been left out of pocket by around £182 as a result of these scams.

Booking.com has advised travellers to pay special attention to deals that seem too good to be true and use only trusted providers.

PASSPORT FOR IRISH FERRIES

IF you are taking the ferry to the Republic of Ireland next month, be ready for a change in the travel regulations.

From September 28, all passengers will be required to carry a valid passport with no exceptions – or risk being stopped before boarding.

Currently, travellers are not required to show a passport, although they can be asked to provide another form of photo ID, such as a driving licence or bus pass.

Ferry operators Stena Line and Irish Ferries, which operate regular crossings, are alerting customers with pre-existing bookings to the changes.

Irish Ferries explained: "This is to ensure compliance with UK Border Force requirements relating to the accuracy and integrity of passenger data before boarding."

Sailings to and from Belfast are not affected.

DIP DIP HOORAY . . . Jacob and daughter in the cold pool

WARRIOR . . . Gwenllian

Best beach in Wales? Tide-y

SHORE THING . . . Cefn Sidan beach

IT'S half nine at night on the summer solstice.

The light is doing the golden hour thing it only does in June, and my four-year-old is scattering dragonflies as she launches herself into the cold water.

"Can we go in the 'cold pool' again?" she asks the next morning. Again. She has asked roughly 200 times this week.

The pool in question is the natural swim pond at Tanylan Farm, on the coast road between Ferryside and Kidwelly in Carmarthenshire.

We stayed in Ty Llo (Calf House), one of a handful of holiday barns on site – and the pool was the single best thing that has ever happened to my daughter.

Rain or shine, morning or night, she was in it. There was a sauna next to it for the grown-ups, a private hot tub outside our holiday cottage, and the beach was 400 yards down the lane.

My wife and I, our daughter and baby son had travelled by train to Swansea then picked up a hire car and made our way to Carmarthenshire – that bit of Wales everyone drives past on the way to Pembrokeshire. Their loss.

On day one, the sun was out so we visited Pembrey Country Park – 500 acres of woodland backing on to Cefn Sidan, an eight-mile stretch of sand that was the first beach in Wales to win a Blue Flag.

The sand is absurdly fine and the water so shallow that by mid-afternoon it had warmed up like a paddling pool. For small children, it is close to perfect.

The park itself is the showstopper, though. There's a dry ski slope, a toboggan run, crazy golf, a pirate adventure playground and miles of flat, traffic-free cycling on rental bikes. We arrived planning to stay two hours and left after seven.

Next day, the National Botanic Garden of Wales, just over half an hour's drive from the farm, was one of the most relaxing family days out we've ever done.

Monty Python fame

Think Eden Project but at a size you can easily get round with a buggy and a pre-schooler.

The Great Glasshouse, packed with plants of six Mediterranean climates, sits in the landscape like a dropped raindrop.

We ate our picnic sandwiches in the "Canary Islands", with the smell of cedar and lavender.

Outside is 568 acres of restored Regency parkland, lakes, waterfalls – and a Gruffalo trail themed on the kids' book character. Kidwelly Castle, of Monty Python movie fame, is a 20-minute drive away.

"Let's climb to the top, Daddy," my daughter begged. So we did – and the views over the Gwendraeth estuary are worth the effort.

From on high, I told my princess-obsessed daughter about a real one, Gwenllian, who rode out from this castle to lead an army into battle against the Normans. I left out how it ended (head lopped off) and she was suitably impressed.

Our final stop was the British Bird of Prey Centre which recently moved to a purpose-built site at Idole, near Carmarthen, after years at the National Botanic Garden of Wales.

It flies golden eagles, red kites, owls and peregrines, with three shows a day and an indoor arena for when the Welsh rain sets in.

We did get four days of rain but it barely affected our week's getaway.

There was always a glasshouse, a castle, an indoor flying arena – or that cold pool.

We'll be going back for more – she's already asked.

stay with the stars

MORE than two decades after the original 1998 cult classic stole the hearts of film fans, Sandra Bullock and Nicole Kidman are back in Practical Magic 2.

And while the sequel, out in cinemas on September 11, is set in a fictional seaside town in Massachusetts, New England, filming locations included a very old England destination – Essex.

The stars shot scenes on a classic train on the Epping Ongar Railway as well as at St Mary and All Saints Church in Abridge near Lambourne.

One of the railway's 1960s British Rail Mark 1 coaches was transported to Warner Bros. Studios in Leavesden, Herts, for filming before returning to the tracks in Essex.

You can ride on the line and sit where the stars sat.

Tickets for the railway, which runs services every weekend, start from £19.50 per adult for an All Day Rover and £3 per child age three to 15. See eorailway.co.uk. The Grade I-listed St Mary & All Saints Church in Lambourne, with its ancient trees, historic churchyard and secluded atmosphere, also stood in for a classic American parish church.

essential

JET lag can be an absolute killer, especially if you're only visiting your holiday destination for a short period.

Coffee may help fight it for a while, but there's only so many cuppas you can have before the jitters hit.

That's where Dirtea gummies come in. These all-natural sweets are a more healthy way to kick the jet lag slump.

There's a gummy to pick you up when you're flagging (Performance), a gummy to help you prepare for sleep during those wired evenings (Calm) and a gummy to boost your immunity and bat away sniffles (Immunity).

Each comes loaded with vitamins, has no added sugars and relies on the raw power of mushrooms.

For example, instead of focusing on just magnesium to aid sleep, the Calm gummies contain reishi mushroom extract, which has been shown to lower stress and support relaxation.

Gummies currently have 30 per cent off online. Flavours include watermelon, berry and peach.

RESORT HOTEL MAKES PERFECT BASE FOR

JUNGLE JAUNT . . . Krabi's wonderful Rayavadee Resort

OAR INSPIRING . . . kayaking amid the beauty of Klong Root

Beautiful Krabi sticks with you

I'M walking down the M1 in my flip flops, the trilling of birdsong above me as a cheeky monkey throws fruit skins from the trees.

The only motors on this brick-lined path winding through the jungle of the Rayavadee Resort in Krabi are those powering the sunset chorus.

And while the bright lights of Thailand's big cities may mean chaotic tuk tuks, the only traffic jam I see is a family of spectacled langur monkeys running from one tree to another before scampering across the beachfront.

"It's 5pm, it's their home time," a staff member tells me. In the slow lane is the water monitor lizard, lazily crossing the path before slinking into the pond to cool down.

This beautiful resort in the heart of Krabi's Phra Nang Peninsula on the border of the marine national park delivers laid-back luxury with not one but three stunning beaches lapped by the warm waters of the Andaman Sea.

My home off the M1 pathway was a circular, two-storey, dome-roofed wooden pavilion designed to echo the unique rounded cliff rock formations that pepper the surrounding landscapes. Downstairs, there's a living room with plush seating and garden views. Up an open, spiral staircase is the spacious bedroom, with the pavilion's curved glass windows welcoming the jungle indoors.

Those naughty monkeys are just as keen on the luxury digs – make sure to keep your terrace doors locked otherwise you might have a visitor raiding your minibar.

And as tempting as it would be to simply pull up a lounger on one of the three stunning beaches it sits on – Railay West, Phra Nang and Nam Mao – part of the hotel's ethos is to get you out there and interacting with the local community.

We set off bright and early in a truly unique transfer – a giant sea tractor to counteract the challenges of the low tide.

I hung on for dear life in the metal carriage contraption the tractor pulls along, before swapping to a longboat for part two of the journey as the savvy captain manoeuvred along narrow channels.

I'd survived, jelly-legged, but not for long. A short drive away were the waterfalls of Khao Phanom Bencha National Park, a primary filming location for Jurassic World: Rebirth featuring Scarlett Johansson and Jonathan Bailey.

Crashing waterfall

Our guide warned us it was a "bit of a challenge" to get there. And, just like Thai people have a different definition of "spicy" compared to us Brits, what they call a slight challenge is an understatement.

I clambered up what felt like sheer rock faces, stretching my knees almost to my ears as I attempted to reach the summit.

But it was worth it. The steep path cleared and ahead was a beautiful, crashing waterfall and lagoon surrounded by trees. I threw off my sweat-soaked T-shirt and slid into the pool (water monitor lizard style) to cool off in the 30C heat.

My only disappointment was the lack of Jonathan Bailey in it. No matter.

My afternoon took me to Klong Root, a haven for kayakers. Paddling through mirror waters, the shade of the mangrove trees was welcome, with the splashing of my oars being the only sound.

This was followed by a local cooking class in the rural community Baan Nong Talay, the pounding of the chilli plant making my eyes water from the heat.

But the delights of the Rayavadee Resort were calling and I made it back in time to grab a table at the most sought-after spot to watch the sunset, The Grotto, nestled on the edge of Phra Nang Beach.

As a riot of bright pink and orange burst across the skyline, my lychee martini went down just as easily as the sun before a meal of freshly grilled steak and Andaman lobster straight off the coals.

After the luxe lifestyle at Rayavadee I was not ready to take on the buzzing streets of Bangkok after our flight there.

Bang Kachao is just 45 minutes from the centre but couldn't be a bigger contrast. This lush green oasis where the Chao Phraya River bends in a sharp U-turn is known as Bangkok's "Green Lung". For just £1 you can rent a bike to cycle along the forest paths – the perfect pause before a whirlwind 24 hours in the most happening city neighbourhoods.

I braved the crowds of Song Wat – named one of the world's coolest neighbourhoods – for copious amounts of coffee, photobooth snaps and funky souvenirs.

I mooched over to the historical Talat Noi, where honking scooters screeched past while I browsed local street art, devoured tiny coconut pancakes for 20p and Chang beers for £1.80.

I filled my bag with local Thai designer clothes in Siam before a late-night massage for a quarter of the price of in the UK.

My days of relaxation threatening to be forgotten about, the beautiful Park Hyatt welcomed me with air-conditioned arms.

It came in the form of rooftop infinity pools, rooms with just-as-amazing views from the floor-to-ceiling windows, and one of the best breakfast buffets I've ever had.

Fresh pork congee, mango sticky rice and Thai tea waffles – I'd be coming back with more weight than just my suitcase.

SPENDING RISES WITH MERCURY

HOW hot does it have to be before it is deemed beer garden weather?

Just 21C, according to new research from Parkdean Resorts.

A study from the holiday park company revealed just how easily we can be swayed by the weather, with just a few degrees altering our spending habits.

The data showed that almost half of us spend more when the weather gets warmer and that specific temperatures will trigger certain reactions.

The mercury has to reach 21C before it is acceptable to swap hot coffee for iced, and apparently it only has to reach 20C for folk to enjoy a cooling beer or other alcoholic beverage – although many of us wouldn't wait, of course.

To brave a dip in the sea, however, most of us would need it to be 24C outside, just a tad more than the 23C required to persuade us to book a last-minute staycation.

Parkdean said: "Behaviourally, it's not simply that sunshine makes people spend more, it changes the environment around the choice.

"People are out for longer, socialising more, seeing more prompts to buy and treating the day as more of an occasion than an ordinary routine.

"The purchase becomes part of the experience – the ice cream on the walk, the drink in the beer garden, the barbecue food, the new outfit for a sunny weekend.

"In the UK, sunny days can feel like a limited opportunity, so people may be more likely to spend on the things that help them feel they're making the most of the moment."

BE AMAZED AT THORPE SCAREFEST

AFRAID of the dark? Then you should steer clear of Thorpe Park this Halloween.

To celebrate 25 years of its Fright Nights, the theme park's terrifying new scare maze plunges thrillseekers into complete darkness.

After a power failure trips the lights, visitors will have to make their way out with only a failing torch to guide them . . . but they won't know what creatures are lurking in the shadows.

The new Tenement maze will join four other scare mazes for Fright Night, which returns to Thorpe Park from October 2 until November 1.

Among the mazes for 2026 is Trailers, which brings nightmares to life at the SuperSpark Cinema, plus there's Stitches, where visitors must avoid becoming part of a creepy toy emporium collection.

There's also Survival Games, an obstacle labyrinth, and nightclub-themed DeadBeat.

Visitors can watch live shows in Lucifer's Lair and dance at the Rebel Ball, as well as tackle some of the theme park's scariest rides.

Tickets from £39pp online or £66 on the gate. Tickets including entry to the scare mazes start from £71 online and £98 for a walk-up price.

Fright Nights experiences are recommended for those aged 13 and over. The Survival Games maze is for 15 years plus. See thorpepark.com.

SPAIN TOPS FAVOURITE HOTSPOTS

FIVE fantastic Spanish holiday resorts have topped a list of our favourite holiday destinations this summer.

Online travel giant LoveHolidays studied the reviews from thousands of customers who have travelled since the schools broke up.

Families were asked to rate their hotels out of five across seven key criteria: Holiday experience, location, service, value for money, cleanliness, facilities and food and drink.

The Costa Dorada resort of Cambrils took the top spot with a score of 4.55 out of five, followed by Santa Ponsa in Majorca; Puerto del Carmen in Lanzarote; Puerto Rico in Gran Canaria and Fuengirola on the Costa del Sol.

"Families have a shortlist of destinations they know and trust," says Al Murray from LoveHolidays.

"But our ranking shows some of the strongest hotel experiences are happening in resort towns people might be less familiar with.

"That's why the customer reviews we're now sharing on our hotel listings are so useful. They give people access to real-time feedback from other LoveHolidays travellers, making the all-important decisions of where to go and which hotel to pick that bit easier."

Here, we've dug into the details as to why each destination scored so highly – and there's a great deal for each one so you can try yourself this autumn.

■ Cambrils, Costa Dorada: This former fishing village has a strong reputation for seafood and Catalan cuisine so it's no surprise it scored well for food and drink, earning an average of 4.53 from guests. Families were also impressed with the location of hotels in the area, with a score of 4.76, and service, at 4.63.

Seven nights' B&B at the 3★ H10 Cambrils Playa is from £279pp including flights from Luton on October 17.

■ Santa Ponsa, Majorca: Families gave hotels in the town 4.51 and scored the destination high for holiday experience (4.61) and location (4.78) thanks to its sheltered bay, walkable seafront and easy access to Palma. Seven nights' self-catering at the 3★ Residence Mallorca Portofino by Pierre et Vacances is from £179pp including Stansted flights on October 15.

■ Puerto del Carmen, Lanzarote: The resort's mix of beaches, marina and seafront restaurants scored highly at 4.41 with hotels in the town rated well on location (4.56), holiday experience (4.53) and service (4.51). Seven nights' self-catering at the 3★ Hyde Park Lane is from £219pp including flights from Southend on December 2.

■ Puerto Rico, Gran Canaria: With an overall score of 4.40, hotels here stood out for food and drink, earning the highest score at 4.75, reflecting its growing reputation for quality dining. Seven nights' self-catering at the 3★ Holiday Club Puerto Calma is from £189pp including Stansted flights on September 16.

■ Fuengirola, Costa del Sol: Fuengirola scored 4.34 and hotels were rated well across the board, with strong numbers for holiday experience (4.34), cleanliness (4.60) and location (4.46). Seven nights' room-only at the 3★ Ilunion Miramar is from £179p including flights from Luton on October 27.

Cheslin's a booty for Boks

South Africa.... 33 New Zealand...26

By ADAM HATHAWAY

CHESLIN KOLBE booted seven out of seven as world champions South Africa levelled the four-Test Greatest Rivalry series 1-1.

The wing banged over four penalties and a hat-trick of conversions — yet the Boks were out-scored four tries to three.

Kolbe's heroics came five days after he was left out of Rassie Eramus' 23 having suffered hamstring and ankle injuries in last Saturday's defeat against New Zealand.

Erasmus put him back in on Friday and his haul, plus tries by Jesse Kriel, Damian de Allende and returning skipper Siya Kolisi, helped the Boks reclaim No1 in the world rankings after the All Blacks nicked it last week.

Kolbe said: "We could feel the mood from South African fans.

"In Test match rugby, you need to take every point that is given to you.

"Last week we did not capitalise on that."

The All Blacks scored twice in the second half through full-back Damian McKenzie and wing Leroy Carter.

But captain Ardie Savea said: "It is a bitter pill to swallow. We stuck in there but we came up short — we have to regroup and go again."

Chang's off mark

By ROB MAUL

CHANG BINGYU became the second Chinese cueist caught up in the 2023 corruption storm to win a snooker ranking title.

The world No 45 beat compatriot and 2025 world champ Zhao Xintong 10-7 in the Wuhan Open final.

Having knocked out Ronnie O'Sullivan from the semis, Chang hit eight 50-plus breaks to lift the £175,000 pot — and take his first ranking title.

Chang, 24, was just 20 when he was banned for 'fixing a match' at the 2022 British Open.

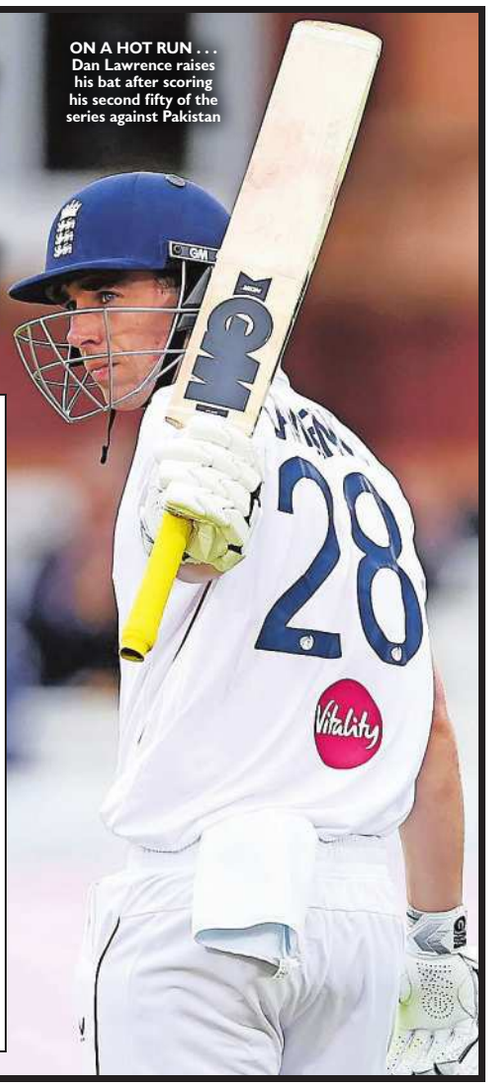
His three-year suspension was reduced to two years after pleading guilty.

Despite losing, Xintong is now world No 1, replacing Judd Trump at the top.

O'Sullivan said: "It's amazing really. He hasn't even had a full two years.

"To be world No 1 by only playing half the tournaments of the other players, that is an incredible achievement."

Dan nifty with fifty



ON A HOT RUN . . . Dan Lawrence raises his bat after scoring his second fifty of the series against Pakistan

By JOHN ETHERIDGE

DAN LAWRENCE raised hopes of extending his England recall with a half-century in tough batting conditions.

It included arguably the shot of the series when he danced down the pitch and lofted Pakistan seamer Mohammad Ali for six over extra cover.

By contrast, Emilio Gay's latest attempt to nail down a place for the winter was ended by a horrible grubber.

With a delayed start and interruptions all day, the ball darted, jumped and kept low alarmingly on the Lord's pitch.

By the close of day three, in which just 24.5 overs were possible, England reached 177-7 with a surely unassailable lead of 357.

Lawrence was 50 not out – his second fifty of the series – having survived on the Lord's snakepit with a mixture of luck, improvisation and occasionally middling one.

He hit a second six hoicking left-arm spinner Ali Usman into the crowd at mid-wicket.

Lawrence, 29, was called in after injuries to Jacob Bethell and Sam Curran but is likely to miss out when everybody is fit.

He said: "It's pointless looking at the future. I'm just trying to contribute and give a good showing and I think I've done that. I'm desperate to establish myself in an England shirt."

Opener Gay had scored 31 when a delivery from Mohammad Abbas barely bounced and struck him just above the ankle.

Harry Brook was well caught by wicketkeeper Mohammad Rizwan from another Abbas nibbler while Jamie Smith and Gus Atkinson both fell before the early finish.

NORRIS' £120M McLAREN DEAL

ONE FOR THE MONEY . . . Lando Norris will earn £30million a year until 2030 at McLaren

By ISABELLE BARKER

LANDO NORRIS' megabucks new deal worth around £120million will keep him at McLaren for the next four seasons.

The British world champion signed a contract reportedly paying him in the region of £30m a year until 2030 – making him Formula One's third-highest earner.

Only seven-time world champ Lewis Hamilton and four-time title winner Max Verstappen beat Norris in the pay stakes.

Hamilton's three-year deal is thought to be worth £44.3m a season at Ferrari until 2027, while Verstappen's new Red Bull terms – announced at the Dutch Grand Prix last weekend – prompted speculation it was for as much as £73.9m a year.

In addition to his new deal, Woking-based McLaren will gift Norris an MCL39 – the car in which he won the team's first world title since 2008.

Norris, 26, joked: "It's certainly not close to the figures I've been seeing online, sadly!"

He added: "Of course, it's a bit more with any job when you extend.

"But it's certainly not close to the level of Lewis or Max. It shouldn't be because I've not achieved as much as they have.

"In a way, I believe it should be because I believe I can fight them whenever I need to and I can do a better job whenever I need to. So I guess I have the two opinions on it."

Norris made his F1 debut in 2019 and his 163 GPs are already the most for McLaren.

His current deal was due to run until the end of 2027 but Norris revealed he did not consider leaving.

He added: "It really was the easiest decision I've had to make in my career so far.

"I'll be very, very happy at the end of my career to say that McLaren is the only team I've been with."

McLaren have already locked in Norris' team-mate Oscar Piastri, 25, who last year signed an extention until the end of 2028.

Norris is currently fourth in the world title standings – 83 points behind the leader, Mercedes' Kimi Antonelli.

But he has recovered from a rough start to the season to win the last two races in Netherlands and Hungary.

POGACAR . . . crashed

Crocked Pog out of Vuelta

By ROB MAUL

TADEJ POGACAR was forced to abandon the Vuelta a Espana after he broke his collarbone in a heavy fall on stage eight.

The Slovenian — the world's best cyclist — fell while in the middle of the peloton with 32km to go.

Pogacar suffered a concussion, a "stable" fracture in his neck and cuts, according to the team doctor. His shoulder will require surgery.

The 27-year-old — aiming for a clean sweep of the three Grand Tours — fell after bumping shoulders with another rider.

Five-time Tour de France winner Pogacar tried to remount but cried out "No" before sitting down again for treatment.

He was taken away in an ambulance with his arm in a sling as he abandoned a top race for the first time.

The crash throws into doubt his participation at next month's Road Cycling World Championships.

The UAE Team Emirates-XRG talisman had led the race following three stage victories in six days.

Frenchman Bryan Coquard, 34, won the 171-km stage.

And Spaniard Enric Mas leads the new General Classification.

Movistar ace Mas, 31, had trailed Pogacar by three minutes and 50 seconds.

Coquard, of the Cofidis team, said: "It's a real shame. We've still got a few races."

Big meet shelved

By ROB MAUL

THE husband of Serena Williams has canned his lucrative athletics event following "feedback" about the timing.

Athlos — an all-women meet for elite track-and-field stars — will no longer host a one-off event on October 2 at New York's Icahn Stadium.

But a planned meet in London on September 18 at the StoneX Stadium, home of Saracens rugby, is set to go ahead.

British stars Keely Hodgkinson, Georgia Hunter Bell and Amy Hunt are expected to run for significant prize money.

The concept is the brainchild of Reddit co-founder and Williams' partner Alexis Ohanian.

He axed the USA event because athletes said it was too soon after the Ultimate World Championships in Budapest.

But he said: "We are all-in on London. It will be an epic night."

GRASS COURT

Weed stench a worry for Brits

TOKE THAT . . . tennis centre could get pongy

BRITAIN'S tennis stars are bracing themselves for the distracting smell of WEED at the US Open.

It is legal to smoke, vape or ingest cannabis for both recreational and medicinal purposes in New York State, provided you are 21 or older.

Also known as marijuana, pot or grass, cannabis can only be bought at licensed dispensaries – but it is the second-most commonly used recreational drug after alcohol.

Last year some players complained about the pungent aroma of joints that wafted over the US Open grounds.

Although it is forbidden to smoke on site at the tennis complex, stars have often moaned about the smell on outside courts near the adjacent Corona Park.

Katie Boulter says the stench can "take you out of the moment" while playing or practising.

The British No1, who takes on American wildcard Carol Young Suh Lee today, said: "Yeah, I have experienced it.

"You go down to the practice courts and down in the park courts, you do smell it a lot. It's not great. I'm not a huge fan of it. I know a lot of players have complained.

From ROB MAUL in New York

"It's something I wouldn't like to smell in the middle of my match. I'm trying to focus and then it takes you out of the moment. You don't need distractions."

Harriet Dart – one of four British qualifiers to reach the first round – added: "It's New York. I mean, I feel like everywhere you walk around, it's everywhere, no?"

But Fran Jones, who will face Magda Linette from Poland, is not worried about the weed.

The Yorkshirewoman said: "I did notice it last year. I said to the [staff] guy: 'Is this normal?'. I was on court, the stadium, and it's next to the park. He's like, 'Yeah'.

"I joked, 'Well, no wonder I'm playing pretty well'.

"It doesn't bother me. I live in Barcelona and you can smell it everywhere."

A USTA spokesperson said: "While we can't control what takes place off the grounds . . . we constantly work with the NYPD and Parks Department and believe this has helped to decrease smoking near our fence line."

FERY FINAL BLOW

By ROB MAUL

ARTHUR FERY heads to the US Open with the regret of not being able to lift a first ATP Tour-level trophy.

The Wimbledon semi-finalist fell short in the Winston-Salem Open final — going down 6-3 6-2 to Peruvian Ignacio Buse.

At 3-3 in the first set, Buse, 22, then won the next six games in a row as he dominated the contest and Fery simply ran out of steam.

Seven weeks after his exceptional exploits on SW19 grass, which earned him £900,000 in prize money, Fery was defeated in North Carolina in the warm-up event before the New York Slam starts.

Yet he will replace Cameron Norrie once again as British No1, having briefly lost the mantle to his Davis Cup team-mate this summer.

Fery said: "It wasn't to be. I'm sorry I wasn't able to put on a better show.

"To my team, we've had a great year and I hope we can finish strong."

Only 13 Brit men have won an ATP title in the Open era but Fery, born in France yet Wimbledon raised, will have to wait.

The 24-year-old (below), now travels to the Big Apple and faces Italian No13 seed Lorenzo Musetti in round one on Tuesday.

This will be his US Open debut but ranking-wise he just missed out on being one of the top 32 seeds.

For Buse it is a second title this year, having been the main man at the ATP 500 Hamburg in May.

Sam puts a shift in for Dolly

By WALLY DOWNES Jr

SAM NOAKES put in the perfect shift to honour Dolly Parton.

The Kent lightweight, 29, came out for his clash with Denys Berinchyk to the country queen's 9-5 anthem following her recent death aged 80.

It all worked out for Noakes — who still helps pals out as a roofer — over the ten rounds.

Noakes is rebuilding after his November world title loss to rising star Abdullah Mason.

He made a lively start before his tight defence kept him safe as the Ukrainian started throwing a few in the second.

Berinchyk hit the canvas three times in the fourth — from pressure rather than punches.

Noakes had his opponent staggering backwards in the eighth and went on to secure a 19th pro win 100-90, 99-91, 98-92.

MOSES JOLLY announced himself to big-time British boxing in an impressive draw with Guido Vianello.

Buckets of blood were spilled as Swansea underdog Jolly, 30, pushed Italian Vianello all the way over eight frantic rounds.

The referee scored the bout 76-76.

Fab new Dan date

FABIO WARDLEY will rerun his epic battle with Daniel Dubois on October 17.

The 31-year-old former white-collar fighter from Ipswich only lost his WBO heavyweight world title to Londoner Dubois in May.

Now Wardley has grabbed the rematch, with just five months to recover from his brutal defeat.

He made a dream start in Manchester, dropping Dubois twice inside the first three rounds.

But Dubois rallied and the referee stepped in to stop the fight in round 11.

Wardley said: "Doing the fight in London will be special. It will not be a rematch, it'll be revenge."

Dubois added: "It's going to be another dominant performance and win."

Oh crikey,

ITAUMA SUFFERS GRIM STOPPAGE

MOSES ITAUMA suffered a sickening stoppage loss after underdog Filip Hrgovic stunned him with a ninth-round attack.

By WALLY DOWNES Jr

Croatia's 2016 Olympic bronze winner was supposed to be the ultimate step-up opponent and a genuine threat to Itauma's hype train.

But he lost all of the first seven rounds in an incredible clash for the vacant IBF heavyweight world title.

A right hand in round eight changed all of that, though.

Itauma, the kid he vowed to "smash back to high school" was knocked out on his feet and he took a beating in the ninth before he was rescued by the ref – just as the towel was thrown in.

It was an astonishing comeback win for Hrgovic that saw Itauma, 21, stretchered out of the ring.

Respected Brits from Olympic silver-winner Joe Joyce to dangerous contender David Adeleye and tough gatekeeper Dave Allen were all beaten up by "El Animal" Hrgovic in the last 16 months.

He had looked superb against Daniel Dubois too but was stopped on cuts.

Friday's weigh-in was the first time ice-cool customer Itauma got heated, shoving Hrgovic off the Spitalfields market stage.

His rival slapped him in retaliation and in the opening rounds it looked the worst mistake he could have made.

Instead of intimidating the prospect 15 years his junior, he lit a fire that he could not live with, let alone extinguish.

But one huge right hand changed that and the whole trajectory of British boxing.

Because Itauma was out on his feet for a full couple of minutes, shipping shots and slowly succumbing in front of the O2 sell-out crowd his early promise had built.

Superstars were ringside for the milestone fight.

Noel Gallagher tipped an early Itauma win before WBO heavyweight king Dubois got in the ring to announce his heavyweight rematch with dethroned Fabio Wardley on October 17.

AJ and the Gypsy King – while dragging their feet over their November 20 targeted clash – chose to stay away.

Howard Foster was the ref between almost 35st of muscle and testosterone as the Slovakia-born Kent sensation and 6ft 6in Croat went to war.

The visitor was bidding to become his nation's first ever heavyweight world champ as Itauma was on track to take over the mantle of British boxing.

After the national anthems, Hrgovic chose to stick a few punches on his own chin, in an effort to brace himself for the oncoming onslaught.

Itauma carried that on as the Brit's early work was a brilliant blur of rasping jabs and drove lefts down low.

A right hook from the Kent southpaw clipped Hrgovic around the temple and he stumbled. Itauma went long left to the body and lead hook to the head, it was superb work beyond his years.

Hrgovic was punished as soon as the second started with a right hook around the nut again that dropped him for a count of eight.

But the Croat was no pushover, he pressured and punched but compared to Itauma it looked like his limbs were moving through treacle.

It was not just attacking excellence either, Itauma was ducking, blocking and rolling shots in the second and third.

But he was caught by the biggest punch of his young career when Hrgovic clipped him with a lead left hook.

Hrgovic's granite chin was impressing everyone in the fourth but the paper-thin skin on his eyebrows was tearing.

The Croat did land a big right hand but it did him no favours as Itauma wrestled back the round.

The Englishman walked Hrgovic on to a thudding left hand in the fifth but the underdog visitor left a red mark under his right eye.

Itauma's gumshield came loose toward the end of the thrilling session and became a distraction but he manhandled it back into his mouth.

Hrgovic's resilience was costing rounds and brain cells by the minute.

But toward the end of the sixth he landed his best combination while Itauma was on the ropes.

It looked like the Chatham man was buzzed but he stood his ground and slashed back and was only stopped from the barrage by the bell.

The breeze block atop Hrgovic's shoulders got pounded again in the seventh, it was a miracle he was still standing after a range of rapid shots.

Round eight was wild, Itauma battering Hrgovic all over the ring, making him look like a punchbag.

But with just a few seconds remaining, the red-hot favourite was whacked and he lost some of his senses, his hands went down and he started to pull some worrying faces. He started the ninth in the same terrible tangle and was battered all over the ring, his legs gone, his arms flaying, his life in serious danger.

The referee and the towel arrived at the same time to save the beleaguered wonderboy from a life-changing beating.

OUR COLUMNISTS ARE THE TALK OF SPORT

NUMBER OF DEALS MAKE LITTLE SENSE

PLAYERS BEING SOLD LIKE MEAT

MONEY MAD . . . Delap could cost £50m

IT really is the most wonderful time of the year.

Premier League clubs are poised to break their own summer spending record of £3.3billion, set only 12 months ago.

What a great demonstration of the success of the most-watched league in the world.

But look beneath the surface and you start to wonder whether English football's financial power is really something to be celebrated.

And what it says about a society which not only sustains it but seems to revel in the eye-watering sums.

This is not wetwipe hand-wringing (OK, maybe it is a bit).

It is obviously silly to say the £116million Manchester City spent on Elliot Anderson could have paid the salaries of x-number of nurses.

It is not the duty of City's Abu Dhabi owners to fund Britain's National Health Service.

Prem chiefs and club bosses can and do defend themselves by pointing out football pays billions in tax to the Treasury, which the governments we elect decide how to spend.

It also employs large numbers of people, directly or indirectly supports other businesses, and does a decent amount of charitable work.

But it is legitimate to look at the sums being spent, ask what they are actually buying, and question the health of the game – both financially and morally.

When it comes to football and money, The Swiss Ramble blog is an invaluable guide to seeing the wood for the trees.

PL combined revenue for 2024-25, the last season for which figures are publicly available, was a record £6.8bn.

Despite that, operating losses – which exclude proceeds from player sales – across the 20 clubs increased to a new high of £1.6bn, more even than the Covid-hit season of 2019-20.

In other words, the richest league in the biggest sport in the world collectively loses money hand over fist while going about its day-to-day business.

If this happened in most other sectors, you would say it was unsustainable.

The main way clubs improve their bottom line – although even then very few ever make a profit, and virtually none do so regularly – is by trading players.

You can always argue the market sets the price. And in the case of the best players available, especially English stars like Anderson or £117m Morgan Rogers, exceptional talent fetches exceptional prices.

Just like the biggest film stars command the biggest fees. But a number of deals this summer make little sense.

Take Liam Delap. No, please, take him, as Chelsea were always hoping this summer.

After joining the Blues for £30m last summer, Delap managed only one Premier League goal.

Yet Nottingham Forest have decided he is the man to lead their attack and worth an initial £45m, plus £5m in add-ons.

It's certainly a gamble in footballing terms. And financially, as with all transfers, you wonder what Forest would have to achieve with Delap in the team for him to be "worth" the fee.

But nowadays that is not the main point. Players are like pieces of meat to be bought and sold, even more so than when Roy Keane made the observation.

Delap is 23, so whether he succeeds or fails at the City Ground, Forest reckon they will be able to sell him on again for a fee that pimps their accounts, just as Chelsea have.

It's like a pyramid scheme. But the investments are people, who deserve respect no matter how well paid they are.

The Blues have a lot to answer for, too. Like Manchester City, they stockpile players (thus depriving other clubs of their services) and ruthlessly get rid of those who do not make the grade.

Delap would probably have done better to stay at Ipswich or join a mid-ranking club like Forest in the first place. You hope he does not go the same way as Kalvin Phillips.

The Leeds midfielder was England's player of the year in 2021 before joining City for £42m.

Whatever Phillips' own responsibility for his decline, City could afford to spend big on him, decide it was a mistake and move on with no consequences, while his career was left in tatters.

Incredibly, Phillips remains a City player, on loan at Sheffield United.

Savio is a less sad example. The Brazilian achieved little at City after leaving sister club Troyes for £21m, yet Spurs have paid £75m up front for him.

It is almost as if billionaire owners are plucking these figures out of the air between them, safe in the knowledge they will not suffer much if the deal goes sour.

As long as their club stays in the Premier League, they will have a trophy asset, sportswashing tool, or something they can sell on to another billionaire who cares little about having a profitable business.

Well, good for them. The rest of the country cannot afford to play with money and people like that.

It feels wrong, because it is wrong.

UNAI'S A WORRY

VILLA PARK under the lights is one of the great stages in English football.

The grand old club which has played there for nearly 130 years should just about be able to scramble together a team to face Premier League champions Arsenal tomorrow night.

But, after a soul-destroying transfer window, you do start to wonder when Unai Emery will say enough is enough.

The Spaniard (below) has lost the spine of the team which won the Europa League.

And, to add insult to injury, the Gunners could field Ezri Konsa against his former club as a potent symbol of the way established clubs greedily stifle the ambition of those who would challenge them.

Even master coach Emery will have his work cut out keeping Villa in contention at home and abroad this season.

But it would be fantastic to see him and Villa still punching above their weight — starting with Arsenal, and clashes against Barcelona and Paris Saint-Germain in the Champions League to come.

Trumping Infantino

SO much for the coalition of the willing against Fifa president Gianni Infantino.

Uefa backed down from their threat to boycott tournaments in a bid to force Gianni Rotten out after his failed plot to sell off the World Cup.

Instead, they are preparing criminal action against the former lawyer in his native Switzerland.

The least Uefa can do now is find a candidate to stand against Infantino (above) when he goes for re-election in March. But it will be a symbolic gesture because he is sure to win.

Where's Donald Trump – who has form for sending in special forces to kidnap a leader and force regime change – when you need him?

SCOT TO LAUGH...

FAMILY links to the blue side of Glasgow made Celtic's spectacular Champions League play-off collapse from 4-0 up against Austria's LASK hilarious.

Only for less than 24 hours, though, as Rangers crashed out of a SECOND European competition in a fortnight.

But it is no laughing matter for Scottish football.

From next season, it is very likely Scotland will lose one of its five European slots and the Premiership champions would need to win through three rounds of qualifying to reach the Champions League proper.

And when you look at the starting line-ups of the Glasgow giants, there are few Scots.

It puts the achievement of Steve Clarke (above), who led the nation at three major tournaments, into perspective.

It is hard to see it happening again anytime soon. Perhaps ever.

Sarr sign

KOP STILL WANT ISMAILA AS £123M BARCOLA IS AGREED

CAMARA . . . talks

CAMA IS COMING

CHELSEA'S bid to sign Monaco midfield star Lamine Camara to replace Enzo Fernandez is close to completion.

The Senegal ace, 22, could fly to London today to finalise the deal.

Manchester City are set to make a move for Blues' £120million-rated Fernandez.

Camara, who played in the World Cup this summer, trained with team-mates yesterday while Chelsea iron out a transfer fee with his Ligue 1 club.

Camara has played in all of Monaco's three matches this season. He had three goals and four assists in 31 games last campaign.

'MAIL SHOT . . . Sarr is wanted by Liverpool

LIVERPOOL are continuing talks with Crystal Palace over Ismaila Sarr as the Senegal star pushes for an Anfield move.

By RAHMAN OSMAN

SunSport has been told Sarr, 28, is desperate for a fresh challenge after success at Palace, having helped them win the FA Cup and Conference League.

Liverpool are finalising a £123million deal for Bradley Barcola (right) from Paris Saint-Germain and have added winger Victor Munoz.

But Andoni Iraola's Reds still fancy more attacking options with Cody Gakpo on the way out.

A £55m bid for Brighton winger Yankuba Minteh has already been rejected.

Like Minteh, Sarr is predominantly a right-sided winger who can contribute both goals and defensive work.

Turkish giants Fenerbahce and Galatasaray have also explored moves for Sarr.

But he was understood to be behind Marcus Rashford and Rafael Leao on their respective wishlists. Leao's Galatasaray move has opened up the possibility of Sarr joining Liverpool.

Sarr hit 21 goals in all competitions last season.

He has three years remaining on his Palace deal, meaning the Eagles remain in a strong position.

SunSport understands an offer has been made for Sarr – with a response awaited.

Sarr has missed Eagles' first two games through injury – and boss Pierre Sage expects him to stay.

Sage said: "For the moment, yes, because when you have three years on the contract it is not easy to leave."

Nottingham Forest are in talks over a £22m deal for Palace wing-back Daniel Munoz.

NEWS TICKER

SUNDERLAND want to bring in Levante's Karl Etta Eyong before the window closes.

Personal terms will not be an issue but the Black Cats need to convince the Spaniards to sell their summer signing from Villarreal.

Cameroon international striker Eyong, 22, has a £26million release clause in his deal.

FULHAM are closing on Romania defender Andrei Ratiu from Spaniards Rayo Vallecano.

Right-back Ratiu is also on Nottingham Forest's radar and has a £21.4million release clause.

But the London outfit are hopeful of negotiating a lower price for the 28-year-old.

WEST HAM have signed Norway Under-21 winger Edvin Austbo from Viking.

The 21-year-old was given permission to fly into London for a medical and seal an £11million deal, including £3.15m in add-ons.

Austbo helped Viking win the Norwegian Eliteserien title last year.

LEEDS last night landed Eintracht Frankfurt keeper Michael Zetterer, 31, for £4.2million to be back-up for James Trafford.

Stopper Lucas Perri, 28, has left for Torino on a season's loan with an option to buy. Winger Willy Gnonto may join Fiorentina on a temporary deal.

Guns' Miks and match

ARSENAL face the two toughest away games in their first THREE Champions League matches.

Uefa's computer handed the Gunners a testing start.

Mikel Arteta's beaten finalists will kick off their bid to go one better than last term when they visit Italian outfit Napoli on Wednesday, September 9.

And after hosting French side Lille on October 13, Arsenal face Harry Kane and Bayern Munich in Bavaria on October 21.

Their crunch clash, the home game with Real Madrid and missed summer target Vinicius Junior, comes in the sixth round of games, on December 9.

They finish at home to Azerbaijani minnows Sabah on January 27 when all 18 matches will kick off simultaneously.

The Gunners are also one of two Prem sides, with Manchester City, to avoid any early kick-offs in the league stage.

Cherki ready to take on KDB mantle in new era

RAYAN CHERKI wants to be the next Kevin De Bruyne in Manchester City's new era under Enzo Maresca.

By JACK ROSSER

The fleet-footed Frenchman, 23, sealed back-to-back wins with two memorable goals at Crystal Palace on Friday night.

Erling Haaland also grabbed himself a double in the 4-1 victory but it was Cherki's strikes in a five-minute spell which changed the game at Selhurst Park.

When deciding to sign Cherki from Lyon in a £35million deal last year, Etihad sporting director Hugo Viana predicted he could match De Bruyne's profile within two years.

As seen in Amazon's Pep Guardiola documentary, there were concerns over the midfielder's mentality. But no doubts about his talent.

And there was certainly a flash of KDB about both of Cherki's goals against the Eagles.

The first was a wonderful combination of style and strength, rolling the ball round one defender, keeping another at bay before flooring a third with a finish few would cook up.

Yeremy Pino's free-kick went in off keeper Gianluigi Donnarumma's back to give Palace some hope.

But Cherki went all De Bruyne once more, collecting the ball with his back to goal before running at defenders and unleashing a shot from the edge of the box.

The France international is nothing if not confident. But, while he has eyes on matching Belgian legend KDB – who won an astonishing 19 trophies during his ten-year stay at the Etihad – even he knows he must be careful with the comparison.

Cherki admitted: "I work for that. I don't know if I can but I work all day for that because Kevin De Bruyne is a big, big, big player. And if in my story I can do like him, I'm very happy."

Hearing your boss saying you can reach the level of an all-time greats would be a fine feeling for anyone.

But Cherki insisted: "No, I don't care because I'm here for play, for the fun. "I'm here to help my team. I work all week to give my best in the game."

Despite two goals to follow a pair of assists off the bench in last Sunday's 2-1 win over Bournemouth, Cherki was still not exactly delighted with his performance.

He labelled his first-half performance "st" in a post-match TV interview and revealed he asked boss Maresca for five minutes to show he deserved to stay on.

Cherki needed a touch longer – nine minutes – to deliver his first goal but was worth persevering with.

He explained: "I said 'I'm sure he wants to change'. I said 'Enzo, give me five minutes and I'll show you'. Just that.

"I would have liked to give more balls to Erling – I have to help Erling score as many goals as possible.

"It's true, I didn't play well in the first half. But we know Crystal Palace defend very well, they closed the space inside for me.

"When I take more freedom in the second half, it was very, very better.

"We see it like a boxing match. We see, we feel and we feel where is the space. Friday was just that."

New Palace boss Pierre Sage, who managed Cherki at Lyon, was left to rue his fellow Frenchman's impact.

He said: "I'm frustrated. I think the scoreline is very heavy, because we were in this game for 65 minutes.

"We created some chances from the beginning until they scored the third goal. Then the psychology of the game changed.

"The bad moment is at the 3-1. We came back. We lost our hope in this situation."

Sage also revealed striker Jean-Philippe Mateta suffered a muscle injury in training and faces at least four weeks out.

Arteta hit by Julian KO blow

By JON WEST

JULIAN ALVAREZ has told Mikel Arteta he does NOT want to join Arsenal.

Argentina forward Alvarez, 26, is desperate to swap Atletico Madrid for Barcelona.

Atleti are refusing to do a deal with the Nou Camp giants for the former Manchester City man.

And that should have opened the door for Arteta's Premier League champions to secure the £100million-rated 2022 World Cup winner.

But Alvarez — who was booed by his own fans during last Sunday's draw with Villarreal — is not prepared to give up on his Barca dream just yet.

Transfer expert David Ornstein said on TNT Sports: "He's spoken to Mikel Arteta and said he doesn't want to come."

It has been suggested Arsenal might still get the deal over the line before Tuesday's deadline — but only if they agree a clause allowing Alvarez to join Barcelona in the future.

One deal the Gunners have concluded is a pro contract for Marli Salmon.

The defender, who made his first-team debut against Club Brugge in the Champions League last season, signed on his 17th birthday yesterday.

NICOLAS JACKSON cannot wait to be scoring goals for Unai Emery again.

The Senegal striker, 25, has joined Aston Villa for an initial £47.5m from Chelsea, with keeper Emi Martinez going in the opposite direction for £7.5m.

Villa manager Emery bossed Jackson at Villarreal from 2020 to 2022.

Ahead of tomorrow's visit of Prem champions Arsenal, he said of Emery: "He's been very important to me since the beginning.

"He developed me in Villarreal and I'm very happy to be here and working for him again.

"I want to score a lot of goals for the team.

"We will work and push together as always, try to achieve things together like we did in Villarreal.

"Hopefully we can achieve that and win some trophies."

Jackson fills the gap left by the departure of England star Ollie Watkins, who has joined Saudi outfit Al-Hilal for £51m.

KONSA CAN DRIVE CHAMPS TO EURO GLORY SAYS SAGNA

EXCLUSIVE by JOSHUA HALL

BACARY SAGNA has tipped Ezri Konsa to be the missing piece that wins Arsenal the Champions League.

Defender Konsa joined the Gunners in a £51million move from Aston Villa last week – and could make his debut against his former side at Villa Park tomorrow.

The England man's arrival at Arsenal may not be the most glamorous transfer, particularly after the club spent the summer pining after superstars such as Vinicius Junior and Morgan Rogers.

But the move was necessary for manager Mikel Arteta, who is expected to be without centre-back William Saliba for a lengthy portion of the season due to a back injury.

Konsa, 28, has been brought in to fill the gap left in Saliba's absence and to offer high-quality competition when the Frenchman returns.

And former Arsenal right-back Sagna – who made 284 appearances for the Gunners up until 2014 – is convinced the rivalry Konsa will offer could be vital in the club's quest to finally taste European success.

Speaking to SunSport via prediction markets reviewer Action Network, Sagna (right), 43, said: "To be competitive, you need to have two players in each position and the season is long.

"It's not, of course, a competition inside the squad. The squad is genuine because all the players get on well together. But to be competitive and successful, players need to understand that they need a back-up.

"So whoever plays doesn't lower the level of the team – and I think if Arsenal want to go for higher competitions and reach the dream, which is probably to win the Champions League, Konsa is the type of player you need to have.

"You need players with different profiles. Positions need to be covered and Mikel Arteta understands this."

Arteta has already splashed out on bringing Christos Tzolis from Club Brugge and Newcastle's Bruno Guimaraes to North London this summer – and still hopes to bolster his attack before Tuesday's deadline.

But it could be Konsa who proves to be Arsenal's most vital signing.

The Gunners relied heavily on their defence to finally lift the Premier League title after a 22-year wait last season and may have to do so again this term.

Arteta has built his foundations on a solid back line.

That was evidenced by the fact that Saliba, Gabriel, Jurrien Timber and David Raya were all named in the PFA Team of Season this week.

Despite their success, Konsa bettered all of Arsenal's defenders last season regarding ground-duel and tackle success rates. He was also a key man in England's World Cup squad this summer.

Konsa's combative style has made him one of the best defenders in the Premier League and it is a big reason why Sagna thinks he will be a success in N5.

The Frenchman, who also played for Manchester City, added: "He has established himself with Aston Villa and with England.

"I think he had a good tournament and he's so good one-on-one. He's not scared to be one-on-one.

"He is good in challenges and duels – and this is what Arsenal need because most of the time, having possession of the ball exposes you – and you need this type of player who has the brain to defend in one-on-one situations. He's one of them.

"Having the ball and having so much possession is one thing but being able to defend one-on-one like Saliba has been doing, like Gabriel has been doing, like Konsa is able to do, I think it's important for the squad."

HURZELER . . . praise

Fab: Wel done but have an off-day!

By TONY LITTLE

FABIAN HURZELER thanked Danny Welbeck for all he did at Brighton — but hopes he has an off-day for Chelsea today.

Forward Welbeck, 35, scored 51 times in 201 games for the Seagulls in six years before his move to West London.

He netted his first Blues goal in the Carabao Cup home win against Luton on Thursday.

Ahead of this afternoon's Stamford Bridge clash, Brighton boss Hurzeler said of Welbeck: "Great personality, great player. We had a really, really good relationship.

"Like I always said, I was really grateful working with him because he helped me a lot.

"He helped me on the pitch, he helped me beside the pitch. You don't have these kind of words a lot in football but I'm definitely grateful for working with him.

"I want him to have a great finish to his unbelievable and very impressive career, so I'm really delighted he scored [against Luton].

> He helped me on the pitch and beside it
> — FABIAN HURZELER

"But on Sunday he can take a break — and then afterwards I wish him all the best again!"

Seagulls defender Olivier Boscagli knows will it be a "tough game" against Chelsea — but reckons Albion can beat anyone on their day.

The Frenchman said: "We've had a good start of the season, we have to keep going in the same way.

"We know how hard it is to play Chelsea, especially away, a really strong team. But we also know we have the quality to beat them.

"We're in good shape, in a good rhythm. Eight goals [so far], it's really important. So it gives us a lot of confidence.

"If we play on our best level, we can beat everybody."

Blues nicking plan & players from South Coast is still a costly work in progress

WHEN Brighton board the bus bound for Chelsea today, they will be following the most well-trodden path in Premier League football.

By JACK ROSSER

Since Blues' American takeover in May 2022, a total of FIFTEEN players and staff have swapped the Amex for West London.

Three more, including Brighton's old technical director, David Weir, have joined Chelsea's sister club, Strasbourg.

Two players have also made the same move as Weir, with one of those – Valentin Barco – now at Stamford Bridge.

Julio Enciso was in talks over a move to Chelsea before eventually ending up at Ipswich.

Former boss Graham Potter and a number of his coaching staff made the move to the King's Road.

Of eight coaching staff only Ben Roberts – now global head of goalkeeping – remains.

Aside from perhaps the ever-questioned keeper Robert Sanchez, those players have been a success, while youngsters Shim Mheuka, 18, and Zak Sturge, 22, made the move at academy level.

It has become the Premier League's very own 'special relationship', though it is remarkably one-way and expensive.

Chelsea have handed Brighton more than £300million in transfer fees and compensation.

No wonder Paul Barber, Albion's CEO, described the Blues as his 'best customer' after a 2025 £60m deal for Joao Pedro adding: "Chelsea has loyalty points with me."

Danny Welbeck was the latest to move to Stamford Bridge – and the striker's arrival for £5m is another sign of Blues borrowing from Brighton's playbook.

The Seagulls have often combined bright young talents, such as Moises Caicedo or Alexis Mac Allister, with older pros including Welbeck, Adam Lallana and, more recently, James Milner.

Chelsea, after years of watching promising but inconsistent talents blow up in big moments, have caught up with the idea that a bit of know-how can go a long way, with Welbeck, 35, added alongside midfielder Jordan Henderson, 36.

The initial intention when owners BlueCo arrived at Stamford Bridge in 2022 was not to copy the Seagulls.

But the suggestion then was that the plan was to follow the path of Spanish giants Real Madrid in identifying the brightest teenage talents in markets such as South America and snap them up before anyone else had even taken a look.

That is how they landed Brazilian 19-year-old Estevao Willian, who looks set to be a big success.

But Real Madrid's model, unlike Brighton's, does not involve selling those gems.

Under Tony Bloom, Albion have become the gold standard for moving players in and out while earning enormous profits.

The Seagulls' policy has, at times, irked previous bosses and caused friction but has undoubtedly carried the club forwards. It should be noted that they, and not the Blues, are playing European football this year.

While Chelsea do not have Bloom, they have assembled some of his key dealmakers from years gone by. Paul Winstanley and Sam Jewell play a key role in the recruitment and talent identification.

During the pre-season tour the pair alternated roles in England, Australia and Asia to ensure they could work on deals around the clock – and Winstanley has a reputation as a talented negotiator and dealmaker.

And the Blues appear to have developed their own adept talent for selling.

In the summer of 2025, Chelsea became the first Prem club to raise more than £300m in sales during one transfer window.

While they have spent eyewatering amounts under the BlueCo ownership, their sales ability is raising eyebrows within football.

This summer, £236.5m has been raised, with another £47.5m added on Friday after striker Nicolas Jackson's confirmation as an Aston Villa player.

Should midfielder Enzo Fernandez complete the move to Manchester City he is seeking, Chelsea will once again smash through the £300m and likely move above £350m in sales alone.

Off the pitch, the model appears to be working but maybe not on it.

In two of four seasons under their BlueCo ownership, Brighton have twice finished above Chelsea – including last year when the Londoners sacked two managers and finished a lowly tenth place in the Prem.

Whether Blues, or anyone, can successfully copy the Brighton playbook is almost unanswerable.

The Club World Cup was a triumph but many are desperate for more top-tier silverware to justify the enormous outlay.

GRAHAM POTTER (head coach)

Took charge at Chelsea in September 2022 after Thomas Tuchel was axed. Sacked in April 2023. Had an unhappy spell at West Ham but is now Sweden boss.

BILLY REID (assistant head coach)

The long-time assistant to Potter moved from the Amex at the same time. Left when Potter exited Stamford Bridge and joined him at West Ham.

BJORN HAMBERG (first-team coach)

Also joined Chelsea as part of Potter's coaching group, leaving in August 2023. Returned to coach Brighton Under-18s before becoming IF Elsborg boss in February.

BRUNO SALTOR (first-team coach/interim boss)

Ex-Brighton skipper was briefly interim head coach after Potter's exit, leaving in September 2023. Linked up with Potter at West Ham and is now Spurs assistant boss.

BEN ROBERTS (goalkeeping coach)

Brighton's former goalkeeping coach moved to Chelsea in 2022, staying with the club after Potter's exit. Later given the title head of global goalkeeping, he remains on the coaching staff under Xabi Alonso.

REGIS LE BRIS told Sunderland winger Romaine Mundle he has the X-factor.

By IAN MURTAGH

But Black Cats boss Le Bris warned the 23-year-old there is work to do before he can consider himself a fully fledged Premier League player.

The former Tottenham youngster has endured a rollercoaster in 2½ years at the Stadium of Light.

Hamstring issues have plagued Mundle (right), restricting him to just 52 appearances since arriving from Standard Liege.

And he missed a sitter against today's opponents Fulham in February.

With the game goalless, Mundle was clean through on goal but sliced his shot wide from close range.

Fulham took the lead moments later and went on to win 3-1 – they were the only side to beat Sunderland home and away last term.

Mundle was subjected to abuse on social media – and did not play for the rest of the season.

Many predicted he would move on but instead the Londoner has been rewarded with a new contract – and he has a big fan in Le Bris.

The Frenchman said: "It is clear Romaine has the X-factor and it is not easy to get this X-factor.

"As a left winger, he is a really good finisher. If you observe him in the training sessions, he is one of the best.

"But these qualities are not enough to become a Premier League player.

"You need time to become more mature, more well rounded and add different layers. We need to support him. But he has this potential."

While Mundle looks set to be on the bench, Chris Rigg is pushing for a starting place.

Le Bris said of the 19-year-old midfielder: "Comparing his start last season to this and it is a huge improvement.

"It is not just about his football but his maturity as a man. His confidence has grown.

"Often, you can be exactly the same shape but when you are more confident, you look bigger, you look sharper and you look quicker. That is the case with Rigg.

"He has been a really good sub and this season he might start soon."

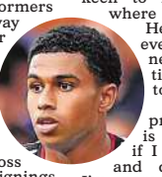
SHEA CAN MULTITASK

SHEA CHARLES is ready to scrap for a Fulham starting role — even if it means becoming boss Alvaro Arbeloa's Swiss Army Knife.

By CHARLIE GORDON

The £26million signing from Southampton started in midfield in the Carabao Cup on Thursday but finished the game in central defence – a position he learned in Manchester City's youth ranks.

And he was one of the standout performers who played his way into contention for a Premier League nod at Sunderland today, having come off the bench in the 3-2 loss to Chelsea on Monday.



With a new boss and summer signings jostling for position, these are key weeks for Charles.

But he is not the only one trying to impress.

Charles (above) told SunSport: "It's like this every season but especially when there's a new manager. Everyone is fighting, there's a healthy competitive nature around the squad.

"It's a really good group with a lot of quality, so the competition is always high in training.

"The boss and his staff have done a really good job of translating his ideas to us. Especially with me coming in a little bit later.

"He's told me what he wants from me.

"All the boys are really getting to grips with it and I feel like it's starting to flow really well."

Charles' versatility opens up multiple routes into the starting line-up – but the Northern Ireland international is keen to remind Arbeloa where he is at his best.

He added: "Whatever the team needs at any time, I'm happy to do.

"Obviously, my preferred position is centre-mid but if I have to drop in and do a job then I'm more than happy."

After defeat to a strong Chelsea, and victory against League One Wimbledon, today's trip to Wearside should give Fulham a better sense of where they stand.

Charles said: "I've played at the Stadium of Light and it's a really tough place to go. They have a really good fanbase and team.

"We know it's going to be a very tough game but we've just got to be confident and make sure we're prepared."

MUHAREMOVIC . . . impressive start

By ROSS HEPPENSTALL

TARIK MUHAREMOVIC is already proving a smash hit at Leeds — and so is his dad!

The 6ft 4in Bosnian centre-half arrived for £34.1million from Serie A side Sassuolo this summer and impressed hugely in back-to-back wins at Nottingham Forest.

During last Saturday's Premier League opener at the City Ground, the 23-year-old's father Rasim was spotted in the away end belting out Leeds songs.

Whites boss Daniel Farke said: "Tarik's a very bright guy and he established a very strong connection with every player within 48 hours of arriving here.

"He's a brilliant character and speaks nine different languages – a smart guy who's enjoying life.

"He's been totally committed from day one but sometimes I have to calm him down because he gets so excited!

"I have to make sure he doesn't lose focus by being over-emotional."

Farke added: "And his dad is also welcome to join us whenever he manages to get tickets.

"It can be difficult due to the demand for the home and away ends but if he's able to get a ticket then he can use his voice and sing a few proper songs."

Centre-back is Leeds' strongest position as Muharemovic competes with Joe Rodon, Jaka Bijol, James Justin and new-boy Nico Elvedi.

He will be tasked with stopping Bees striker Igor Thiago today and Farke warned: "Tarik needs to keep improving because this is his first season in English football.

"He has all the potential, the early signs are really good but let's not sing his praises too soon."

Malick is buzzing

KEITH ANDREWS says El Hadji Malick Diouf "fits what we're about" after he joined Brentford from West Ham in a £40million deal.

The Senegal defender — who played four times at the World Cup — could make his Bees debut against Leeds at Elland Road today.

Boss Andrews said: "He settled into the Premier League at a new club, a new environment, a new culture very well at West Ham last year and had some eye-catching performances.

"We obviously did more due diligence on him, his character and how he would settle into the group.

"He fits what we're about with his age profile and attributes and he comes into an already competitive squad."

Diouf, 21, said: "They've seen things in me that maybe I didn't see myself. They're looking forward to helping me and I'm really happy with the plan.

"I watched them a lot last season. The team is very athletic and I have that profile as well, so I think I can adapt well."

Carrick: Hull defeat hurt us all

By SAMUEL LUCKHURST

MAN UNITED CORRESPONDENT

MICHAEL CARRICK'S calm persona has been tested a couple of times already this season.

He took exception to the suggestion Manchester United lacked "passion" in last week's 2-0 opening defeat at Hull – and on Friday the head coach dismissed some analysis of the game as "lazy".

Questioning Carrick's methods or his team seems to be the chink in his armour when he holds court at Carrington.

He told one journalist: "You've watched football a long time, right?

"Teams lose games and win games – and it's not just because you try or you don't try.

"Just because we lose a game doesn't just mean leadership, or I got passion thrown at me after the game, it's not just that. You lose two set-plays like we did, it changes the game.

"There's all sorts of different reasons for the defeat. I don't have to give you the total reason, because we know what we're trying to improve on.

"But I'm just saying to you, I think it's so easy and lazy to say, 'Team loses a game, everything's wrong. This is wrong, not trying enough, not enough passion'.

"It's just like the obvious answer. We've probably played like we did at Hull and won games.

"And then everyone goes, 'What a great team, what a great coach, what a great load of players' when we find a way to win 1-0."

United face another promoted side today as they host Ipswich in their first home game of the season.

Given the lack of crises since Carrick was appointed in mid-January and back into the Champions League with a third-place Prem finish, this has been his most testing week in the role.

And he seemed a little tense. Carrick added: "Success comes from how well you deal with setbacks in the end.

"In any position, certainly any sport, particularly this one, going through a season there's going to be setbacks, sometimes a bit smaller than others.

"It's how you deal with that initially, how you react to that, what comes next.

"That ultimately decides what type of team you're going to be.

"So far, we've dealt with those setbacks really well, within games, game to game.

"Yeah, we had one last week. No getting away from it and it's disappointing. But we look to bounce back.

"We had a good week. The boys are refocused, learned where we could have improved, and keep pushing forward.

"In terms of response, I've seen what I wanted this week for sure.

"It hurts when you get beat, it hurts us all. And as I said, it's how

POUR TIMING . . . YouTube video displays Old Trafford in the rain

The ASMR clip, shared to the club's 11.5million YouTube subscribers, pans around the pitch, concourse and tunnel.

ASMR is a sensory response some people experience to a sight or sound — such as rainfall. It triggers a tingling feeling that can be relaxing and help with sleep.

Many fans were unimpressed by the video's timing, with the transfer window shutting on Tuesday and the Red Devils yet to add a left-back.

Lewis Hall is their top target with Newcastle refusing to sell.

One fan moaned: "United be doing ANYTHING but signing a left-back."

Another said: "You should do crickets next. To go with this transfer window."

you deal with that. But the boys have come back and you could tell we were coming back after a defeat. You can sense it.

"But I like how the boys have come together, stuck together and done the right things.

"They have trained really well and refocused for the weekend. It's the only way."

While matchgoers were away, United ramped up plans for a new Old Trafford in July – purchasing a triangle of land adjacent to the current stadium.

Old Trafford's concourse and kiosks have been upgraded for the new campaign, while a fanzone has also been installed.

Some regulars will not get to experience them yet after the club's botched ticket-touting investigation saw a section banned for a year unfairly – a process that has driven a wedge between club and supporters.

Carrick dodged a question on the club's treatment of their paying fans, instead expressing sympathy for those at Hull who discovered that trains back to Manchester had been cancelled.

There have been suggestions of minor protests outside the Old Trafford ticket office – yet the 116-year-old stadium is a sell-out for the visit of Ipswich.

The Tractor Boys are no longer the borderline gimme they appeared to be pre-Hull.

Especially as Gary O'Neil's side got off the mark with a late win against Sunderland at Portman Road last week. Records tumbled at Hull. And Ipswich – back in 1984 – were the last side to beat United at Trafford when the hosts had led at half-time.

Carrick also tasted the misery of an August loss against a promoted side as a United player.

He said: "I remember missing a penalty against Burnley in 2009, I think it was the second game, we got beat 1-0.

"I'm sure they just got promoted as well. We had just won the league and got to the Champions League final.

"So, it's part of it, it happens. We don't want it to happen."

Sir Alex Ferguson dropped Carrick for the next game at Wigan. Even after his calmness wavered, Carrick is unlikely to be as impulsive.

Giant Kjell's big ambitions

TALL ORDER . . . Scherpen will face a fired-up United today

By JON WEST

THE Premier League's tallest ever performer wants to be better known for big saves in big games — starting at Manchester United today.

Kjell Scherpen broke a record last weekend when he helped Ipswich beat Sunderland on their top-flight return.

The Dutch keeper stands 6ft 9in tall – an inch taller than former Black Cats keeper Costel Pantilimon.

But Scherpen, 26, made it clear the only numbers he really cares about are shots saved, clean sheets and points.

He said: "It's a good record to have but I hope they will remember me not just for my height but also because I'm a good goalkeeper and make loads of saves – and save the team. That will be satisfying me more.

"My height, of course, is a big positive. Obviously there's things that I have to do differently to a goalkeeper who is six feet or even smaller.

"But on the other hand I have to shape my own way of goalkeeping and can't look too much to others because they're not in the same body as me.

"I try to take every part of the game that fits best to my body and my height. Out of that, I can be massive in goal and a really annoying guy for strikers."

Scherpen could have a busy day at Old Trafford as United aim to bounce back from their shock opening weekend defeat at Hull.

But he arrived in Suffolk with experience of taking on big guns from his time at previous club Royale Union Saint-Gilloise, who sold him to the Tractor Boys for an initial £8.5million over the summer.

The Belgians punched above their weight in last season's Champions League, beating PSV Eindhoven, Galatasaray and Atalanta.

Scherpen believes Town face a similar step up in class when it comes to Premier League action.

He added: "It was really good to get the experience and to learn from those moments.

"We will probably also have some games this season where we have to struggle, where we have to take the pressure and survive."

Town last won at Old Trafford in 1984 but Scherpen said: "I'm really looking forward to it, going to Old Trafford to play there is a dream."

Ex-United keeper Edwin van der Sar signed Scherpen in 2019 when the Dutch legend was CEO at Ajax.

But Scherpen grew up a Feyenoord fan so Van der Sar made him write "Ajax is the most beautiful club in the Netherlands" a thousand times!

He moved to Brighton in 2021 but could not break into the first team.

The big stopper said: "I don't want to say I didn't get a chance there.

"I was not in the right place at the right time. I got a lot of experience with loans, playing in the Europa League and the Champions League in Austria and Belgium.

"That developed my game a lot and is why I'm really happy now to be back in England, able to show what I can do."

4 IPSWICH are looking to start a top-flight season with two wins in a row for a fourth time — also doing so in 1974-75 (finishing 3rd), 1980-81 (2nd) and 1993-94 (19th).

Ant & Yoane show life after Howe to burst Spurs bubble

NEWCASTLE fans were dreading the start of this season — after the departure of Eddie Howe and THREE of their best players.

There was even talk of relegation.

By complete contrast Tottenham, having avoided the drop by the skin of their teeth in May, had expected an instant change in fortunes.

Boss Roberto De Zerbi splashed out more than £300MILLION on new players — including one of those Toon exits, Sandro Tonali.

There was even talk of the top four.

Instead, with £100m midfielder Tonali suffering an absolute shocker in N17 yesterday, hosts Spurs ended up with a result just as painful as the opening 3-0 loss at Brentford.

As for Newcastle — agonisingly close to beating Liverpool in their opener last week before conceding an injury-time penalty to draw 2-2 at St James' Park — they are flying. What a start for new boss Matthias Jaissle (right).

And it was two players who were a disaster under Howe last term, Anthony Elanga and Yoane Wissa, who produced the moments of real class that won them this match.

By CHARLIE WYETT

Elanga did not score once in the Premier League after his arrival from Nottingham Forest in a £60m deal last season.

But he has already netted twice this campaign and his goal here was a beauty — even better for the Toon fans in the away end because he turned Tonali inside out.

Wissa, an initial £50m from Brentford, never got going after missing three months with an injury.

But he also looks reborn and, after an encouraging showing against Liverpool, he sealed this clash with an outstanding touch of class.

The Toon Army had barely stopped celebrating being 2-0 up when they saw the fourth official indicate Tottenham's No16 was being replaced.

5 SPURS made five changes to the starting XI yesterday from their opening-day defeat to Brentford — the club's most line-up changes between their opening two games of a Premier League campaign.

every touch, trudged off the pitch looking embarrassed.

Throughout the game, the travelling support sang, "There's only one greedy b" at the Italian – although they did the same to Alexander Isak six days earlier.

And maybe, at home to Arsenal in November, they might chant the same thing at Bruno Guimaraes.

Although he has maybe won a PR battle having written about his love for the club, despite wanting away for the same reason as the others.

For Spurs boss De Zerbi, this was his first defeat here at the Tottenham Stadium – yet things will get better.

They have to. But it will obviously take time for this huge number of new players to gel.

One of those, Omar Marmoush, only arrived from Manchester City on Thursday and went straight into the team with fellow new boy Savio missing out with a muscle strain.

Marmoush will hope to do better than his ten Premier League goals in 18 months at City.

Although he did look off the pace, wasting the best chance of the first half as he had plenty of time to judge Andy Robertson's far-post corner, only to stick his effort into the side-netting.

After a sluggish start, Tottenham looked better but they failed to take their chances.

Tonali attempted a shot which was so badly mis-hit it went across the goal to Pedro Porro, whose shot ended up superbly blocked by Lewis Hall.

Tonali was just lucky his shot ended up at the feet of a team-mate rather than bobbling out for a throw.

Playing on the right of midfield rather than in defence, Porro also attempted an ambitious volley which would likely have been an early contender for goal of the season had it been a yard lower.

And Newcastle keeper Lukas Hornicek – who arrived from Portuguese side Braga for £25.7m – was pretty busy, keeping out efforts from Mathys Tel, Robertson and Jan Paul van Hecke.

Newcastle sorted themselves out after the break.

Although Marmoush had another chance for Spurs – creating an opening out of nothing but just unable to get his shot on target.

Then it all went wrong for De Zerbi and Spurs.

And two of the Magpies' new summer signings, Nico Gonzalez and Amar Dedic, played their part.

Making his debut just a few days after signing from City for £52m, Gonzalez sprayed a long pass to his right-back, who looks like he could be a bit of a bargain following a £30m arrival from Benfica.

Dedic's header down was perfect but there was still plenty of work for Elanga to do.

He kept the ball away from Tonali brilliantly, turned and found the net with his low left-footed strike via the post.

De Zerbi rang the changes, and his triple substitution included the arrival of Mohammed Kudus, appearing for the first time since January after a serious quad injury.

Yet Newcastle inflicted more agony and another player who struggled last season – Nick Woltemade – made an impact, the sub getting his head to Hall's 72nd-minute corner.

It still looked a difficult chance for Wissa with his back to goal but he somehow hooked the ball over his shoulder past Antonin Kinsky.

Three minutes later and Tonali was hauled off for Dominic Solanke.

It signalled the end of a dreadful day for the £100m man – but a perfect one for Newcastle.

HOW THEY LINED UP

well and were unlucky with the result.

"I know what the plan is and what difficult problems we could find.

"I am sorry for the fans and the players for the result but to change two seasons like the last two is impossible in ten days or in the transfer market.

"Before the end of last season we were in the Championship and stayed up together.

"We have great players — we will change the last two seasons."

Tonali was replaced by Dominic Solanke in the 75th minute.

RDZ, 47, added: "Sandro is a crucial player but he is not in the best condition. Maybe physically.

"I love Sandro. Today is the day where my emotion for my player is bigger than the other days."

Scorer Wissa hailed the impact of Newcastle's new manager Matthias Jaissle.

He replaced Eddie Howe this summer and also saw Bruno Guimaraes and Anthony Gordon depart.

Forward Wissa, 29, said: "The new manager came with a new identity.

"Every part of the game, we're really precise.

"He is a really dynamic manager — the best signing of Newcastle so far."

German Jaissle, 38, added: "This is a good start and a moment to enjoy. Not only the goals but the performance."

It was also a fine debut for £52m midfielder Nico Gonzalez, who only arrived from Manchester City in midweek.

Gonzalez, 24, played a part in Elanga's opener and said: "It was amazing. I am happy for the work I and the team have done."

RDZ: 3 want out

By CHARLIE WYETT

ROBERTO DE ZERBI has admitted THREE players have asked to leave Spurs.

The Tottenham boss says Richarlison, Kevin Danso and Pape Matar Sarr are determined to force a move before Tuesday's deadline.

Richarlison has one year left on his deal and Everton are interested in re-signing the striker.

RDZ revealed: "He said too many times he wanted to leave. Danso came two days ago and said he wants to leave. Sarr is the same.

"You can change many players in one window and find the balance immediately or you need more time. I'd like to do it as soon as possible."

Spurs want around £20m for midfielder Sarr, 23.

Brentford have shown an interest in Archie Gray, 20, but he is unlikely to leave this close to the end of the transfer window.

MOSES HIT BY BRUTAL HRGOVIC COMEBACK

STUNNED . . . Itauma (right) sees his world title hopes dashed by Hrgovic

By WALLY DOWNES Jr

MOSES ITAUMA was sensationally stopped in the ninth round by underdog Filip Hrgovic — just as his corner threw in the towel.

The Brit, 21, suffered his first pro defeat after dominating their IBF world heavyweight bout at the O2.

But wily Croatian Hrgovic, 34, who withstood a barrage of punches, left a knackered-looking Itauma wobbling before the referee stepped in.

City go for Gak

By JACOB MIGNANO

MANCHESTER CITY'S move for Cody Gakpo is back on with the club talking to Liverpool about a bombshell transfer.

SunSport last week revealed Enzo Maresca's side had entered the race for the Dutch forward.

Fears he might be heading to Spurs saw City identify Everton's Iliman Ndiaye as an alternative.

But Gakpo, 27, who set up Alexander Isak's goal in yesterday's 2-2 draw with Nottingham Forest, wants an Etihad move.

Gakpo signed a five-year Kop deal a year ago but has struggled for form.

He has now set his heart on a move to the blue side of Manchester ahead of Tuesday's deadline in a possible £85million deal.

Toon pile pain on £100m old boy Sandro but RDZ won't panic

By CHARLIE WYETT

SANDRO TONALI was jeered by Newcastle's travelling fans as his £100million Spurs switch turned sour.

Tottenham are rock-bottom of the Premier League with zero points – and no goals.

Italian Tonali, 26, was supposed to be the jewel in the crown of a £304.5m summer rebuild but was upstaged by Toon scorers Anthony Elanga and Yoane Wissa.

Spurs were booed at the final whistle but boss Roberto De Zerbi (right) said: "We will not panic. I am not angry, we are working

Alfred's a Sol man

By CALLUM JAMIESON

ALFRED WALLACE dented some lofty reputations in the Solario Stakes.

Backed into 11-4 for in-form trainer Ed Walker (right), the juvenile put his experience to good use in the Group 3 at Sandown Park.

After tracking long-time leader Sonic Angel for much of the race, jockey Kieran Shoemark booted his colt into the lead two furlongs from home.

They battled on to see off Dover Street in second with the much-hyped Breacher third.

He was trimmed into 25s from 50-1 for the Dewhurst at Newmarket.

Walker said: "What a dude, he's an absolute star to back up ten days after York.

"Our fellow just has that battle-hardened experience, he's small and strong and tough.

"We'll definitely have a shot at a Group One with him!"

BOAT SAILS TO TOWER

PUSH THE BOAT OUT got up late to deny unbeaten ace Great Barrier Reef in the Round Tower Stakes at the Curragh. Trainer Michael O'Callaghan said: "He's beaten a nice horse there so we'll aim at some nice races now."

Con clash for Bay

EXCLUSIVE By MATT CHAPMAN

GEORGE SCOTT says his Coronation Cup hero Bay City Roller is likely to take on Constitution Hill in next weekend's September Stakes.

The Prix Foy in Paris had been the dual Group 1-winner's original target, but the weather forecast and a sparkling midweek workout has meant Scott has had a change of heart.

He's now in line to take on Nicky Henderson's ace as well as Gethin in the Group 3 at Kempton on Saturday.

The trainer said: "We went to Kempton in the week and Oisin Murphy said he liked the surface.

"It looks pretty dry in Paris so at the moment I would say Kempton is more likely.

"It's all about the Arc for him and this should set him up nicely. It looks like it will be a strong race!"

TOUGH Zavateri powered through the mud to claim the Celebration Mile at Goodwood.

Eve Johnson Houghton's stable star had been winless in two previous outings this summer, but made the most of the drop to Group 2 company.

Backed into 11-10 favourite, the three-year-old travelled best and took the lead a furlong from home before showing his class to go three lengths clear of Qirat.

Chuffed Johnson Houghton now has her eye on another Group 1 bid at Ascot.

She said: "I said before, 'if he handled the ground he would win.' And he did!

"He's from humble beginnings and we have asked him some tough tasks this season but he has developed into a machine.

"He showed the turn of foot I knew he had.

"He'll go to the QEII at Ascot next, I'm keen for him to go there and back into Group 1 company."

NUIT D'ECLAIR looks a tasty bet in the Group 3 Prestige Stakes (3.10 Goodwood, nap).

She scored nicely in good company at Newbury on debut in July before acquitting herself well in a couple of races at this level.

She was less than a length away over 6f at Ascot and it was a similar story at Newmarket last time. That was her first crack at this distance and she seemed to enjoy it. There's improvement to come.

Raging Reds boss blames '3-minute delay' by fourth official for Morg penalty strike

ANDONI IRAOLA raged after a dodgy subs board delayed his changes — and cost Liverpool.

The Reds were locked at 1-1 with Nottingham Forest and Iraola was desperate to send three players on.

But he had to wait as the fourth official struggled to light up the numbers on the electronic board.

In that time the hosts conceded a penalty, which Morgan Gibbs-White scored to put Forest back in front with 20 minutes left.

Boss Iraola said: "It cannot take three minutes to put the board up.

"I was already angry because we couldn't do it in the previous stoppage either. I still don't know the reason. I think he was having some problems with the board or something."

During the delay to the substitutions, Forest's new striker Liam Delap took a quick throw and Liverpool keeper Alisson fouled Neco Williams in the box.

An angry Alisson (below) is believed to have kicked the subs board as he stormed down the tunnel at full-time.

To make matters worse, replays suggested Delap — himself a 66th-minute sub — may not have had both feet on the ground when he took the throw.

The hosts hit back when Victor Munoz levelled with eight minutes left.

But Iraola has now taken only two points from his first two games and Liverpool are winless in six Prem matches.

Forest, looking for a third straight win at Anfield, could have been out of sight before the break.

Iraola said: "This was not the result we wanted. We were very poor first half but afterwards the intensity was better.

"We didn't defend long throws well, the feeling I have was we were poor and not good enough."

Alexander Isak got the first of Liverpool's equalisers after Dan Ndoye gave Forest the lead.

Oliver Glasner hailed the result after defeats to Leeds in the Prem and Carabao Cup.

The new Forest boss said: "We had lost a bit of confidence but we have an amazing collective and the players showed belief."

LIVERPOOL striker Alexander Isak fired a seventh Prem goal against Nott'm Forest — his joint most against an opponent along with Tottenham Hotspur.

Can't buy MUNOZ GRABS 2ND DRAW AS

By KEN LAWRENCE

VICTOR MUNOZ produced a stunning late equaliser to save Andoni Iraola from an unwanted record.

The Basque was in danger of becoming the first Liverpool boss to lose his first home game in charge in the Premier League era.

The curse of Nottingham Forest – winners on their previous two visits to Anfield – looked like striking again as they twice went ahead through Dan Ndoye and Morgan Gibbs-White.

But after last week's 2-2 draw at Newcastle, Iraola was forced to settle for a share of the spoils after Alexander Isak came awake for their first and Munoz earned Liverpool a point.

Like at St James' Park, the Reds equalised twice with the ex-Bournemouth boss still to see his new side go ahead.

New Liverpool vice-chairman Amit Bhatia – part of a consortium that has bought into the club – watched the game with principal owner John W Henry.

While Paris Saint-Germain winger Bradley Barcola is arriving for £123million, new co-owner Bhatia saw other investment needs as Liverpool struggled to cope with Forest's bright attacks.

In contrast, Liverpool looked sluggish from the start.

Cody Gakpo appeared sleepy when Alexis Mac Allister fired an excellent ball into his feet – a millisecond of hesitation allowing their impressive former wing-back Neco Williams to clear.

Oliver Glasner's Forest reign had started in underwhelming fashion – Leeds having won 1-0 at the City Ground in the league before returning to triumph 2-0 in the Carabao Cup in midweek.

But they looked the livelier side here and it needed a brilliant block from Jeremy Jacquet to deny Igor Jesus from close range after Ola Aina's looping cross caused panic. Centre-back Jacquet, 21, was there again to block from the Brazilian before Ndoye floated a far-post header just wide.

N Forest.....2
Ndoye 24; Gibbs-White (pen) 70

When Forest took a 24th-minute lead it was thoroughly deserved.

Goalkeeper Matz Sels punted the ball 80 yards, Jesus held the ball up and Gibbs-White flicked it on for Ndoye to rifle a 20-yard shot past keeper Alisson.

The fine finish was Swiss World Cup star Ndoye's first Prem goal since the opening day of LAST season.

The defending was schoolboy stuff while Dominik Szoboszlai and Mac Allister were run ragged in midfield.

There is rightly joy at the marquee signing of Barcola (above).

But Arne Slot lost his job last season mainly because of poor defending and similar midfield formations that offered no cover.

It feels that Liverpool have missed a trick in failing to move for a midfielder who can guard the back door like Elliot Anderson, who joined Manchester City from Forest for £116million, or even Carlos Baleba, signed by Manchester United from Brighton this week for an initial £65m.

Liverpool badly needed a spark and Florian Wirtz thought he had provided it in the 32nd minute.

The German span in the box before planting a fine strike beyond Sels.

However, VAR Michael Oliver chalked it off, ruling Jeremie Frimpong had strayed marginally offside in setting up the chance.

Wirtz then saw a fine header dealt with equally well by Sels.

Otherwise, the hosts created little in the first half with Isak starved of service but also too passive.

At the other end, there was more carnage in front of the Kop and Liverpool would have gone in at the break 2-0 behind but for Alisson's world-class reflexes.

Aina, a constant source of trouble, jinked into the box and Jesus put his full weight behind the strike, only for Alisson somehow to palm it on to the bar.

MARK HALSEY
The whistleblower

LIVERPOOL were unhappy with Nottingham Forest's penalty — and there are TWO reasons they might feel hard done by.

Firstly, boss Andoni Iraola wanted to make a triple substitution but fourth official Tim Robinson didn't have the board ready.

It does take some time with one man operating two boards but he did look a bit flustered.

Then I think there could be a bit of controversy about whether the throw-in was taken in accordance with the law.

When a throw is taken you have to have both feet on the ground behind the line.

But new Forest striker Liam Delap looks like he has one foot in the air (inset, right).

The throw is not conclusive but it is a big talking point.

Ref Sam Barrott got the actual penalty award right.

Alisson (inset, left) comes out, challenges Neco Williams and clearly makes contact.

VAR looked at it but they are not going to get involved with a subjective decision.

KOP AWAIT £123M BARCOLA

With Ndoye outstanding and James McAtee showing his talent after making little impact in his first season at Forest, the visitors continued to cut through the defence.

So when the hosts levelled the scores with a magical equaliser on the hour it was out of keeping with what had gone before.

The creator was Gakpo, whose Anfield future is in doubt with the Dutchman a £69m target for Tottenham.

He brilliantly span away from Williams and Murillo before rolling a delightful ball across goal.

There at the far post was Isak – and with only his NINTH touch of the game, he could not miss.

The Swedish striker grabbed the ball, clenched a fist to the Kop and broke into a rare smile after only his fourth league goal since his British record £130m arrival from Newcastle a year ago.

That joy did not last long.

Liam Delap became Forest's own record buy this week when he arrived for an initial £45m from Chelsea.

And the striker – a 66th-minute replacement for Ndoye – quickly made an impact. His quick throw-in caught Liverpool napping and the unmarked Williams powered into the box.

Alisson charged out and clattered into the Welsh international, giving referee Sam Barrott an easy decision to point to the spot.

Gibbs-White decisively struck home the penalty to put Forest back in front with 20 minutes left.

Spain international Munoz, the first signing of the Iraola era, may not be quite as heralded as Barcola, having cost £34.5m from Osasuna in the summer.

But the 23-year-old came to the rescue with a spectacular equaliser to secure Liverpool a point with eight minutes left.

He spun on a smart ball from Wirtz into the box before rocketing home a right-footer off the underside of Sels' bar.

Relief for Iraola. But he will know that he got lucky for the second week in a row.

MILLAR'S THRILLER

Tiger is Sky Blues party pooper

Coventry.....0
Hull.....1
Millar 82

By JOSHUA HALL

SUB Liam Millar spoiled the Coventry Prem party as Hull continued their shock perfect start to the season.

Sky Blues fans had waited 25 years to see their team play a home game in the top flight again but this will have felt like Championship ground-hog day.

Frank Lampard's side have won just ONE of their last TEN league meetings against Hull, with both of last season's games ending 0-0.

The Tigers already had their home Prem return last week, utilising an electric atmosphere at the MKM Stadium to pull off a surprise 2-0 victory over Manchester United.

It meant they came into this match riding high and with a nosebleed sat in fifth place in the table – having started the campaign as strong relegation favourites.

And Millar's tidy finish helped them to build on that surprise start to register another crucial three points for Sergej Jakirovic's boys.

Coventry fans will have been hoping for a heavyweight clash to whet the appetite and give them a taste of what it is like to have the big leagues back in their house for the first time since 2001.

Their 3-0 thrashing at champions Arsenal on the opening day was a baptism of fire that not many travelling fans got to experience.

But the packed out Coventry Building Society Arena will want to forget every second of what they saw against a fellow promoted outfit.

The Sky Blues had drummed up an impressive pre-match atmosphere of their own, with fans arriving at the stadium to get on the beers some three hours before kick-off.

And a hair-raising rendition of We'll Live and Die in These Towns by The Enemy really got the home support in the mood. But what followed did not live up to the hype.

Lampard's men were arguably the better side for most of the game, but never truly looked like coming away with anything.

Striker Taiwo Awoniyi, fresh off the back of his first Coventry goal against Plymouth in the Carabao Cup in midweek, threatened early on.

The £9million buy from Nottingham Forest slapped Jack Rudoni's slide-rule pass goalwards but a block saw the effort deflect wide.

Loum Tchaouna and Aurele Amenda were also desperate to score Coventry's first goal back in the Premier League but both fired speculative efforts well over the bar.

Hull offered some threat of their own, mainly through Elliot Stroud, who had some bright moments down the left flank for the Yorkshire club.

The Swede thought he had won a penalty after 24 minutes, tumbling to the ground under contact from Bobby Thomas in the box.

But referee Josh Smith was confident the challenge was shoulder-to-shoulder and waved play straight on.

Coventry's best chance came when Hull defender Nobel Mendy's attempt to head away a cross landed in the lap of Awoniyi.

The deflection took Awoniyi by surprise, who jerked his thigh towards the ball and forced a last ditch save from Tigers keeper Konstantinos Tzolakis.

But, despite Coventry having the better of it, it was the visitors who finally found the breakthrough late on in the second half.

Millar found himself one-on-one with Coventry stopper Carl Rushworth after a sensational throughball from Mohamed Belloumi.

The Canadian remained calm and tucked it past Rushworth to send the travelling fans wild and pile more misery on the hopeful home crowd.

Millar had done incredibly well to remain cool having just fluffed an almost identical chance moments before. The former Liverpool academy ace scuffed a one-on-one effort wide of a post that had come from a pass from Scottish striker Oli McBurnie just a few minutes earlier.

It is nine months too early to suggest this was a relegation scrap but it would be entirely unsurprising to see both sides fighting for survival come May.

And three points for Hull away from home could prove to be gold dust when the season gets down to the nitty-gritty.

Lampard's Coventry, meanwhile, will have seen this as a game they should have won.

And with a trip to Manchester City just six days away, the Sky Blues are surely going to need a miracle if they want to register even a first Prem point at the Etihad.

McBURNIE . . . praise

Hits and misses for Liam

By JOSHUA HALL

OLI MCBURNIE hailed Liam Millar for showing "massive b*s" as Hull continued their dream start back in the Prem.

Millar's 82nd-minute winner made it two wins out of two without conceding a goal — after also shocking Manchester United last week.

Sub Millar earned praise from team-mate McBurnie for burying a late winner shortly after fluffing a similar opportunity.

McBurnie said: "He was disappointed with the first one and then showed massive, massive b*s to score the second one.

"As a striker, it's not the chance you want when you've just missed — where you're running with it for 40 yards and have to think about your shot.

"You've got too much time to think. You almost want an instinctive one you can just pass in.

"He showed really, really big balls to go and finish it and I am really delighted for Liam."

Hull's start has made a mockery of those who tipped them to challenge Derby's record low Prem points haul of 11.

McBurnie joked: "To say we are the worst team in Premier League history, it is not a bad start!"

It put a dampener on hosts Coventry's first top-flight game for 25 years.

And boss Frank Lampard reckons the pressure of the historic return to the Prem made his players nervous ahead of kick-off.

Coventry lost their opening game 3-0 at champions Arsenal.

Asked if he could sense the edginess, Lampard said: "Yeah, maybe, and I don't like the excuse of it.

"Last week that was a very valid excuse because of the level of opposition.

"We shouldn't use that as an excuse today. It's a game against a team we played last year twice.

"Obviously we finished a lot of points above them but these things mean nothing and the Premier League will give that edge.

"We have to get used to that quickly."

TOFFEES PUNISH SCOTT 'N CO

By GRAHAM NICKLESS

JAMES TARKOWSKI denied Marco Rose his first Premier League win as Bournemouth boss after Alex Scott's timely reminder to Thomas Tuchel.

Last Sunday, Bournemouth conceded a 91st-minute winner at Manchester City.

This time around, Everton defender Tarkowski lashed the ball into the far corner a minute into injury time to rescue a point.

Scott's deflected 41st-minute strike had looked set to claim all three points for the Cherries, while giving England boss Tuchel more food for thought.

Manchester City and Chelsea have been strongly linked with Scott this summer.

But the midfielder will enjoy Europa League football this season with the South Coast minnows – who have made it clear he is not for sale.

Toffees' 33-year-old veteran Tarkowski ruined Scott's day to maintain the Scousers' unbeaten start to the season after Ryan Christie and Marcus Tavernier got in each other's way trying to clear a corner.

If Scott is staying put, Tarkowski's team-mate Iliman Ndiaye was certainly putting himself in the shop window.

City are also said to be ready to hand over £80million for Everton's Senegal star, 26.

And Ndiaye was in the mood to show his true worth right from kick-off at the Vitality.

One solo run had the hosts back-peddling before Thierno Barry's shot was cleared and then Ndiaye nearly opened the scoring in the 17th minute. His low shot was just creeping inside the far post before keeper Djordje Petrovic dived to his right to push it away.

Bournemouth.....1
Scott 41

Tarkowski 90

But the visitors were not having it all their own way.

Four minutes before Ndiaye's attempt, England No1 Jordan Pickford had to be at his best to punch clear Scott's wind-assisted in-swinging corner.

And moments later he had to defend his near post with his legs to deny Bournemouth taking the lead through winger Rayan.

Petrovic then made a double save to keep out the Toffees, who were buoyed by back-to-back wins against Crystal Palace last Saturday and then a 4-0 drubbing of Preston in the second round of the Carabao Cup.

Tyrique George's shot bounced up and hit the Serbian stopper in the chest but Petrovic recovered well to keep out Barry's follow-up.

That was a big blow for Frenchman Barry, who grabbed a hat-trick against North End on Wednesday after also scoring in the 2-0 win at home to Palace.

But this ding-dong contest swung the Cherries' way four minutes before half-time. Evanilson raced on to Rayan's pass, sidestepped two defenders and laid on the perfect pass for Scott.

He steadied himself before driving in a shot that deflected off Vitaliy Mykolenko's outstretched leg and over Pickford's dive.

Everton chief David Moyes was furious in the 55th minute when striker Kiernan Dewsbury-Hall went down in the box.

It looked clear from one TV angle that defender James Hill had clipped the back leg of KDH – but VAR backed ref Chris Kavanagh's verdict of no penalty.

The ever-reliable Pickford made two good saves to deny Rayan and then had to fist clear from Scott's cross.

Evanilson headed the ball back into the box and the Pickford punched it clear again.

Sub Beto appeared to sum up the Toffees' day when he sliced a shot yards wide – much to the delight of the home supporters.

Pickford and his defenders were fighting to the last, with lunging blocks by Mykolenko to deny Rayan and Scott.

The Vitality gave Scott a standing ovation when he was substituted after 87 minutes.

And he would have been gutted to see his replacement Christie involved in the blunder that saw Everton snatch their late leveller.

HOW THEY LINED UP

BOURNEMOUTH: Petrovic, Truffert, Silva, Hill, Smith, Scott (Christie 87), Cook (Adams 69), Tavernier, Kluivert (Brooks 81), Rayan, Evanilson (Rodriguez 81).
EVERTON: Pickford, Mykolenko, Branthwaite, Tarkowski, Rohl (Iroegbunam 87), Garner (Hackney 62), Armstrong (Alcaraz 87), George (Johnson 62), Dewsbury-Hall, Ndiaye, Barry (Beto 70).

GOOD TO TALK . . . scorer Scott did his trademark phone celebration

ARMSTRONG . . . bid

Fans up in Arms at deal

By GRAHAM NICKLESS

EVERTON fans threatened to RIOT if the club sells Harrison Armstrong.

Nottingham Forest are ready to pay £40million for the 19-year-old midfielder, who played 87 minutes of yesterday's draw at Bournemouth.

Travelling Toffees fans repeatedly sang: "Don't sell Armstrong, Harrison Armstrong, I just don't think you understand . . . if you sell Armstrong, Harrison Armstrong, you're going to have a riot on your hands."

Boss David Moyes indicated the decision on whether to sell the academy product is not his.

He looked uncomfortable revealing an offer had been received and said: "It's a club decision.

"We don't want to lose Harrison. I have been saying quite a lot that we need to add to the squad.

"We are not strong squad-wise at the moment but I don't want to talk too much about it."

Moyes also suggested the board should take notice of the fans' views.

He added: "You always have to consider what the supporters are saying. They are not always wrong.

"If I had a message for the fans it's that the manager is an Evertonian!"

Moyes felt the rigours of beating Preston 4-0 in the Carabao Cup on Wednesday took its toll.

But James Tarkowski snatched an equaliser after Bournemouth pair Marcus Tavernier and Ryan Christie bumped into each other.

The Scot added: "In the end it's a good point away from home because we put in some amazing blocks in the second half."

Cherries boss Marco Rose suffered injury-time heartbreak again after their 2-1 defeat at Manchester City last weekend.

The German said: "It was just an unlucky goal — slapstick for me.

"The players were just trying to clear the ball. It was a bad goal to give away — but that's life.

"I saw total effort and attitude from our lads."

JOHN EUSTACE had no problem with Derby fans booing his side off after a crushing home defeat.

Joseph Opoku took less than two minutes to give Swansea the lead with Eom Ji-sung and Brazilian sub Ronald also on target.

Keeper Jacob Zetterstrom saved the Rams from further humiliation with NINE saves.

Eustace fumed: "It was an unacceptable performance. I take responsibility. I pick the team and decide the tactics."

"The body language of a couple of players wasn't great.

"I understand the fans' reaction. The performance wasn't good enough."

Pisa striker Henrik Meister watched from the stands and Eustace hopes to seal a deal for the 22-year-old after Ben Brereton-Diaz chose to join Sheffield United instead.

He added: "Swansea, have spent a lot of money and are building properly. When you do that, you get rewards."

The visitors had 12 shots on target and 31 touches in Derby's box.

Boss Vitor Matos said: "We feel we did a good job and it was a moment to enjoy.

"We need to improve small things but the energy and desire is nice to see."

West Ham.....1

By GARETH DAVIES

WEST HAM fans took out their anger on boss Nuno Espirito Santo as his team's stuttering start hit another low.

Hammers needed a sloppy own-goal from Watford to take a point from rainswept Vicarage Road and are still without a league win in three attempts.

The furious 2,200-strong travelling support taunted Nuno at the end with chants of 'You'll get the sack in the morning' – the first time he has had that treatment since taking over in September last year.

Noticeably, the Portuguese coach was booed when he approached the away end after the final whistle, although the players who stayed behind were cheered.

Nuno said: "The fans are the most important part of our club and I respect them so much, so I understand everything.

"I respect every opinion. I just ask again keep believing, keep trusting us and we'll try to revert it.

"A win must come – hopefully, on Tuesday at the London Stadium. We need it.

"Pressure is on us every day. We are a big club and we are favourites to go up.

"We have two points from three games, so who's happy?

"But me, I believe. I trust my boys and I work very hard with them.

"We are building a team and things will change. I'm positive."

If West Ham do make it back to the Premier League at the first attempt, they should send a bottle of champagne to Kevin Keben in thanks for a point that could prove crucial in the final reckoning.

The Watford centre-back dallied and dithered to open the way to one of the silliest, sloppiest own-goals of the season after 27 minutes.

It was an incident that put the Hammers right back into the game at a time when they were looking distinctly uncomfortable.

The Hornets were leading thanks to a 19th-minute piece of magic from Amin Nabizada when Keben found himself under pressure from West Ham's Argentinian forward Taty Castellanos at the byline.

Instead of clearing into Row Z, poor Keben lost possession, goal-mouth chaos ensued and the mess ended with Keben's central defensive partner Mattie Pollock somehow being 'credited' with an own goal.

That was enough to deny Watford victory in a game the visitors dominated for long periods, only to fall flat in the final third.

Watford, for all their transfer window difficulties, are unbeaten in the league and boss Alessio Dionisi said: "One month ago, when we looked at the first three games against Southampton, Wrexham and West Ham, it looked terrible for us.

"But for me, every match is an opportunity for my team and now we have five points it feels better than a month ago.

"I believe in my team and I hope some new players will arrive.

"I don't know how many or when and I'm sure the club works hard for this. But it is impossible to play with only two centre-backs in every match."

Italian Dionisi, in just his fifth competitive match in England, was left glowing by 19-year-old Nabizada's spectacular opener.

The winger – born in the Midlands of Afghan descent – cut in from the left.

His footwork mesmerised Iron full-back Joel Veltman, before he floated the ball over visiting keeper Mads Hermansen and into the far top corner for his second goal of the Jimmy-Jay Morgan equalised for Baggies by heading in off the underside of the crossbar.

Lanksheart restored the hosts' lead by slotting home within eight minutes, then Jones made sure by turning in an effort from Luke Ayling.

Morrison said: "We can't give away silly goals but two were offside. I'm not going to complain too much — unless it keeps happening."

On £10million new man Lankshear, Boro boss Kim Hellberg said: "The boy is dangerous. I absolutely love working him.

"And I'm so happy for Alfie. He had not played since December so it was special."

Wilder a Card shark

CHRIS WILDER was happy with a point on the road after watching Sheffield United get battered for much of the game.

Blades conceded within 80 seconds of the start before edging ahead with two goals in the next five minutes.

Promoted Cardiff levelled in the 38th minute and should have been out of sight by the end after firing in TWENTY-EIGHT shots, having 46 touches in the Blades box and ten corners.

Boss Wilder said: "I have been in the Championship long enough not to get embarrassed by picking up a result like that.

"I think we were fortunate at times because they were the better team.

"I've been in that situation as well, a promoted team coming up and playing an established Championship team and they were the better side."

Cardiff struck through new signing Jack Moylan before Tom Cannon was fouled by Alex Robertson and slotted in the resulting spot-kick.

Callum O'Hare then fired the visitors in front but Cian Ashford levelled.

Bluebirds manager Brian Barry-Murphy said: "We're obviously disappointed not to have won."

Nuno, who guided Wolves to promotion to the Premier League in 2018, faces his old club on Tuesday.

He added: "It's important to believe in the process and the way we are doing things, while admitting that results are not happening. We're positive that we will click."

Mo 'n Brooks leave Clarets Hayen dry

By TONY RUSHMER

MO TOURE and Andre Brooks both notched twice to pile the pain on Burnley gaffer Nicky Hayen.

The Clarets, relegated from the Prem last term, were knocked out of the Carabao Cup at Bradford in midweek after a 3-1 loss at West Brom last Sunday.

And they made a nightmare start at Carrow Road, falling 3-0 behind inside 21 minutes.

Toure, Brooks and their Norwich team-mates ran riot as the visitors served up a series of defensive errors. Josh Laurent pulled a goal back on 27 minutes but Brooks made it 4-1 midway through the second half.

Norwich.....4
Burnley.....1

And it went from bad to worse for Burnley 13 minutes from the end when Laurent was dismissed for a second bookable offence.

After the final whistle, Hayen and his players approached the Burnley fans and a section of them reacted angrily to their latest defeat.

Hayen admitted: "I know it's really difficult after a season like last season – I know how disappointed they are.

"But you see that we have potential and we need time."

The Belgian boss also acknowledged the opening stages of the first half were a disaster for his side.

He added: "I can accept individual mistakes because you don't do it on purpose.

"But it doesn't help us at the moment, because we came out of the dressing room with really good energy.

"We want to show that intensity and suddenly you see a team that was struggling."

Anel Ahmedhodzic gifted Toure a second-minute opener, failing to intercept Panamanian defender Jose Cordoba's hopeful through-ball.

The alert Aussie striker raced in on goal before sliding a right-foot finish home from 14 yards out.

Brooks made it 2-0 three minutes later, getting on the end of Anthony Musaba's cross to bury a nine-yard shot.

Clarets captain Kyle Walker's heavy touch from Oscar Schwartau's left-sided corner allowed Toure to add Norwich's third goal with an emphatic six-yard finish.

Laurent gave Burnley hope with a stunning 22-yard blast that fizzed into the net via the inside of a post on 27 minutes.

But Brooks sealed the Canaries' first league win of the season with a close-range back-heel strike after sub Papa Amadou Diallo's darting run triggered a slick 67th-minute move.

Norwich head coach Philippe Clement said: "A lot of positive things in the way the team played with the ball.

"How brave we were against their pressing, to break open their defensive line also and to score in the right moments.

"The way the boys moved, the way they found spaces against a good opponent, it's a really positive evening for the club."

NICKY SUMMERBEE

SunSport's Russell Lanning catches up with former Manchester City and Sunderland winger NICKY SUMMERBEE

Summer lovin'

QATAR-BASED former winger Nicky Summerbee relished a Europe break in Italy and Georgia this month, enjoying a special reunion.

The 54-year-old is now an established football TV pundit and commentator for beIN Sports, the key sports channel in the Middle East and Africa since moving over 4,000 miles from Manchester 15 years ago with his family.

Summerbee, who played nearly 500 league games for nine teams between 1989 and 2006, admitted: "We only agreed to spend a couple of months in Qatar but we instantly fell in love with the place and have been here ever since."

After working for beIN TV at the World Cup, Summerbee took time out with a holiday in Europe and had the opportunity to meet up with one of his closest Manchester City pals.

He said: "The trip to Georgia was special to be able to catch up with great friend Georgi Kinkladze (right).

"We had some special times together when he was at Maine Road in the mid-90s.

"Results were completely different then to how things have been at City for the last 15 years but Georgi was a magical and gifted player and one of the most humble guys you could ever wish to meet.

"He is still treated like a god over there. My other City Georgian team-mate Mikheil Kavelashvili has gone on to become the President in the country! It's pretty amazing.

"Georgi has been telling me how his PSG compatriot Khvicha Kvaratskhelia (right) is the new footballing idol of the country.

"Even more interesting is that he tells me Khvicha's 16-year-old brother Tornike, another winger, is as good if not better at the same age."

Older football fans will remember Nicky as a galloping winger who started his career at Swindon in 1989 before helping the Robins reach the Premier League in 1993.

He switched to Manchester City for £1.3million where he spent four years at the club's old Maine Road ground. His family are part of City royalty as not only did he have two spells with the club (1994–97 and 2001) but his dad, Mike, was part of the side that won the top-flight title (1967–68), FA Cup (1969), League Cup (1970) and European Cup Winners' Cup (1969–70).

Nicky said: "We very much have sky blue coursing through our veins.

"After dad's incredible era at the club, none of us would have predicted the sort of success the club has enjoyed over the last 15 years.

"Under Pep Guardiola it has just evolved. After Sir Alex Ferguson we didn't think it would get better but it almost did with Pep providing a management masterclass.

"Just as Sir Alex enjoyed unbelievable success in the Prem era, Pep has been on a par in a shorter time span.

"His departure is a seismic loss to Manchester City and English football's top flight.

"Like Alex, he has set a high bar.

"Along with every City fan, so far Enzo Maresca has picked up the baton with style, winning the opening two Premier League games – the victory at Palace on Friday was particularly impressive. This will be an interesting season."

Summerbee adores life in Qatar and has surprised himself that a two-month break 15 years ago has turned into his permanent home.

He said: "My three children are more or less born and bred here. I'm sure I am like most parents of the same age group – I have become their taxi driver – taking them all over the place!

"I think like any former player, I miss the dressing-room banter. I sound like an old git but football has changed vastly since I played – but I enjoy the broadcasting and media involvement.

"I wasn't fortunate enough to play at a World Cup but thanks to beIN Sports I have now been to two in terms of commentary and analysis. I will never take that for granted."

LIGHTNING ROD . . . Gomes gets the first of his quickfire double

It's all Go!

RODRIGO PILES ON MISERY

By PETE THOMPSON

RODRIGO GOMES' quick-fire double helped rampant Wolves inflict more pain on Stoke.

Sam Gallagher's second-minute thunderbolt had raised the Potters' hopes of securing a first Championship win of the season.

But Stoke sunk to rock bottom after ruthless Wolves came storming back to make it four wins from five under new boss Cesar Peixoto.

Gomes struck twice in the space of three minutes to give Wanderers a first-half lead and there was no way back for the Potters.

Cult hero Raul Jimenez added a third with his second penalty in as many games at Molineux since returning to the club this summer.

And new signing Jordan James put the icing on the cake with a classy late goal on his home debut.

Wanderers went down with a whimper last season but they put on a show for a crowd of 30,334 – and Peixoto insists there is much more to come.

The Portuguese boss, who replaced Rob Edwards in June, said: "After we conceded an early goal it was very important to show a reaction. We showed personality to fight, we scored four goals and we could have scored more, but the boys did a very good job.

Wolves	4
Stoke	1

"It's only three points and we have to stay humble, just as the boys have done since I arrived.

"I like the way the team play but we know we have to improve a lot.

"We scored four goals and had a good win but we have to be consistent.

"That's the difficult thing, to stay at the same level and keep improving."

Gallagher scored his first goal since March with a 30-yard right-foot rocket into the top-left corner.

Sorba Thomas wasted two golden opportunities to double the Potters' lead – and the Hull target was made to pay.

Gomes capitalised on Eric Bocat's heavy touch to level after 19 minutes, lashing home after Viktor Johansson saved Jimenez's strike.

The Portuguese winger raised the roof a few minutes later with a goal that was created by the lively Mateus Mane. The tricky teenager, 18, beat two men and, when his attempt was palmed away by Johansson, Gomes was on hand to finish with his right foot.

Mexico striker Jimenez gave Wolves breathing space on 55 minutes, calmly sending Johansson the wrong way from the spot after he was upended by Ben Johnson.

Mane had a strike palmed away by the busy Johansson before James came off the bench to rub salt into Stoke's wounds in the 84th minute.

The on-loan midfielder from Rennes found Fer Lopez and then drove into the box to plant a fine first-time finish into the bottom corner after the Spanish playmaker set him up with a clever pass.

Stoke have now lost their first three Championship games.

Boss Mark Robins said: "They've not had to work for a goal and this is a really good squad of players – they will be up there this season.

"But we have been the architects of our own downfall for the second week running – a really bad habit.

"We look like we could be a really decent team but we've got to stop making stupid decisions and shooting ourselves in the foot."

IMP-ORTANT . . . House

IMPS' HOUSE PARTY

By DANE MASSEY

BEN HOUSE'S winner helped Lincoln record their first points of the season — and first win in the second tier for 65 years.

His 66th-minute header got last season's League One champions off the mark following defeats in their opening two matches.

Imps co-boss Chris Cohen said: "It was by no means perfect but we put the points on the board and I'm proud of the performance.

"We had to fight but we are a club built on spirit and we had to show that.

"Ben is first class without the ball and he's a top footballer as well – he's had a great start to the season."

Also promoted Bolton were left to rue failing to convert first-half chances with Sam Dalby hitting a post and Lewis Brunt's header forcing a fine save from George Wickens.

Bolton	0
Lincoln	1

The deadlock was broken when Callum Elder's long throw bounced up for House.

Bolton rallied but Wickens saved from Ryan Hardie and Josh Sheehan.

Trotters gaffer Steven Schumacher said: "We played well. We created lots of chances and should have been ahead at half-time.

"Apart from a ten-minute spell in the second half, I thought we were the better team."

NICE KAR . . . Grant is leapt after winner

Nath cool at the top

Charlton.....1
Preston.....0

By DANNY RUST

NATHAN JONES will not allow himself to dream of the Premier League — despite spearheading Charlton to their best start to a second-tier season since 1992.

Karlan Grant's neat turn and finish saw off early season strugglers Preston.

And Charlton are now the only Championship side boasting a 100 per cent record.

But Jones is keeping his feet on the ground after bouncing back from a mid-week Carabao Cup rout at Tottenham.

The Charlton boss said: "It's only three games so we won't be silly.

"No one wins anything in August. If I had a time machine, I'd quickly zip to May and we'd hopefully be in the Premier League. But that's not the case.

"We thoroughly deserved the win. We stuck to our shape and tried to believe in ourselves.

"But we're not concentrating on being top of the league. Nine points from three games – that's the big thing."

Preston should have taken a first-half lead but the unmarked Callum Lang headed Andrija Vukcevic's cross.

The Addicks improved after the break and struck the vital goal on 56 minutes.

Grant cleverly made a yard for himself with a brilliant turn and beat keeper Daniel Iversen at his near post.

He then celebrated by pointing to former Charlton youngster Ezri Konsa, who was watching from the stands following his £51million move to Arsenal.

The Lilywhites are still searching for their first point of the season and boss Paul Heckingbottom is desperate to bring in a new striker before the transfer window slams shut on Tuesday.

He said: "Both boxes is where it went wrong. We conceded a horrible goal.

"We had spells of controlling the game but it's about winning.

"I'm seeing us winning headers in the opposition box but who is going to bundle the ball in for us?

"That's the big thing that's still missing. You've got to make the ball go in the net."

JAMES WARD ROUSE

Prowse's inspiring return

Southampton.....5
Millwall.....1

By TOM PRENTKI

THE prodigal son returned and inspired a thumping victory which catapulted Saints off the bottom of the Championship.

James Ward-Prowse (right) came on as a half-time sub to a huge ovation as he made his second debut for the club, 15 years after his first.

The 31-year-old midfielder rejoined Southampton from Championship rivals West Ham on Friday.

And St Mary's boss Tonda Eckert said: "It's not easy to come on at half-time and we've just seen the quality of a player he is, how much he can give us on the ball.

"Very happy for him being with us. A big, big presence for the experience he brings.

"He knows the club inside out and it's just so good to have him around.

"He's going to be very important for us this season."

Kyle Larin scored twice with goals from Finn Azaz, Tom Fellows and a penalty from Leo Scienza wiping out Mark Sykes' 15-minute opener for Alex Neil's Millwall.

The Lions came roaring out of the traps and were battering Southampton even before they took the lead.

There was a touch of good fortune about the goal as Sykes' fierce shot cannoned in off Saints new-boy Keven Schlotterbeck.

But from that moment on, Eckert's lads did not look back and Neil was left to rue his team's defending.

He said: "It was a strange game. For 25 minutes we were very good.

"We took the lead and I thought the boys should of scored another.

"For us to then concede from a set-piece is bitterly disappointing.

"The grittiness and resilience we usually have was missing for the last 20 minutes. When you play a good team that's clinical, it can give you a bloody nose and that's happened."

Canada striker Larin levelled on 25 minutes when he headed in a brilliant Ryan Manning free-kick from six yards out.

And 13 minutes later, the brilliant Scienza twisted Caleb Turner inside out and put it on a plate for Azaz to tap in from close range.

Ward-Prowse replaced captain Flynn Downes, who was forced off with a head injury.

In the 55th minute, Jake Cooper sent Azaz tumbling in the area.

The fans were calling for JWP but Scienza seized the ball and hammered it into the bottom left corner.

Another brilliant run from Azaz saw Larin cheekily flick the ball over Caleb Taylor's head before volleying it in for Saints' fourth.

Larin should have had a hat-trick but keeper Max Crocombe stood up well to block him and Azaz could not convert the rebound.

Fellows capitalised on a poor clearance to score via a heavy deflection off Crocombe with four minutes left.

And in the final moments, Ward-Prowse went close to capping a perfect afternoon but fired just wide of the post from 25 yards.

Sku's on red alert

Bristol City.....2
Portsmouth.....1

By ROB STEWART

BOSS Michael Skubala told the Cider Army to celebrate his first win with a traditional West Country tipple.

But the Bristol City chief confessed he would toast victory with a glass of red wine — and that the result was tinged with a touch of frustration.

Skubala said: "The hardest thing is winning matches so hopefully the fans will go and have a cider or a beer or a wine and enjoy the moment.

"I just felt frustrated we didn't keep a clean sheet because I'm a bit of a perfectionist.

"It was great to get off the mark and I'll have a glass of red wine with my staff and enjoy it, then watch the game back and get to work on Tuesday's trip to Preston."

Swiss striker Lorent Tolaj put City in front on 31 minutes, finishing off a counter-attack with a cracking near-post finish.

Skipper Jason Knight doubled the lead on 56 minutes, heading in Rio Cardines' corner.

Sub Marko Milovanovic pulled one back for Portsmouth with a stoppage-time penalty after Lisav Eissat wrestled him to the floor.

But Pompey boss John Mousinho said: "We're not a million miles off but we made a couple of errors and lacked bit of experience and nous."

Sout fits for Parky

By JOHN RICHARDSON

PHIL PARKINSON hopes to land Leicester City's £10million-rated defender Harry Souttar.

The "shell-shocked" Wrexham boss wants a commanding centre-back after "the two softest goals we've conceded" saw his side lose 2-1 to Birmingham on Friday.

Hollywood owners Ryan Reynolds and Rob Mac have already splashed £29m in this window but Parkinson is banking on their backing again.

Visiting defender Phil Neumann's headed double from two set-pieces showed why the Foxes skipper — an Australia international — is Parky's No1 target.

Provided he gets his man, he will be happy when the window shuts.

But Parkinson warned: "It doesn't matter what team is on the pitch, we have got to be aggressive in the key moments — and against Birmingham we weren't."

By SIMON YAFFE

UNBEATEN Rangers got the job done as captain Jimmy Dunne headed their winner.

Blackburn led on 49 minutes through Ryoya Morishita's stunning volley into the top corner.

But Paul Smyth fired QPR level just two minutes later from Rimarn Burrell's cross – celebrating with a cartwheel.

And defender Dunne, 28, headed Tariq Lamptey's 74th-minute cross beyond keeper Balazs Toth.

Boss Julien Stephan saluted his captain after Rangers started a season without a defeat in their first three games for only the second time in ten years.

The Frenchman said: "It was a brilliant performance from Jimmy. He was dominant and what I enjoy about him is his ability to take the initiative on the ball.

"He protects the box and he does what I want to see from our leaders."

Threadbare Rovers were missing nine senior players and had four teenagers on the bench.

Chief Tony Mowbray said: "There were lots of positives and we had spells where we were dominant.

THOSE WERE THE DAYS

COMPILED BY Russell Lanning

ON THIS DAY IN HISTORY

1999

ANDY COLE hit four for Manchester United in a 5-1 win over his old club Newcastle — putting the reigning champs three points clear at the top after six games.

Cole opened the scoring on 13 minutes and added another three goals in the second half before helping Ryan Giggs to United's fifth.

2014

STOKE picked up their first Premier League victory in Manchester after Mame Biram Diouf's solo effort stunned champions City — winning 1-0.

Stoke had lost all their 12 previous league games at the Etihad and Old Trafford, with manager Mark Hughes savouring the win at his old former club.

2023

CHELSEA were rescued from a Carabao Cup scare as boss Mauricio Pochettino turned to his £106m World Cup winner Enzo Fernandez to see off Wimbledon.

The Argentina midfield ace netted in the 72nd minute after the Blues had gone behind, with Noni Madueke equalising from the spot.

Hen pecks at his Owls

By JON WEST

HENRIK PEDERSEN was annoyed with his SHEFFIELD WEDNESDAY stars — despite thrashing BROMLEY 7-2.

Jamal Lowe (inset) and Louie Barry bagged braces with goals from Callum Slattery, Mason Burstow and Gabriel Otegbayo.

Victor Adeboyejo's penalty and Otegbayo's own-goal boosted Bromley late on.

Owls boss Pedersen fumed: "How we finalised the game was not good enough, we gave two easy goals away.

"This is not who we want to be. The first 75 minutes was a strong performance."

BLACKPOOL moved into top spot after a 4-0 thumping of PETERBOROUGH.

Jordan Williams, Dion Charles, Karoy Anderson and Jerry Yates found the net to knock BRADFORD — 2-0 losers at PLYMOUTH — off the summit.

HUDDERSFIELD stayed in second as Joe Taylor's late double secured a 2-1 victory at CAMBRIDGE.

STOCKPORT are third after two Harry Wood goals helped thrash WYCOMBE 5-1.

Luka Smyth scored twice as NOTTS COUNTY came from behind to down ten-man BURTON 2-1 with Curtis Tilt sent off.

Burton's Finn Delap, 21-year-old brother of Nottingham Forest's £50million man Liam, scored his first goal as a pro.

MARTIN SHORT!

Russ rues missing goal

By PETER OAKES

MK Dons.....0
Leicester.....0

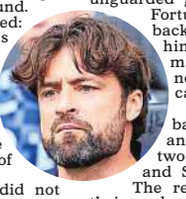
RUSSELL MARTIN shrugged off Leicester fans' boos and insisted: "I want to give them a team they are proud of!"

Pressure is already mounting on Martin (below) after four games without a win and his stay at the King Power could be even shorter than his four months at Rangers unless he turns things around.

But the Foxes boss claimed: "The only thing missing was a goal. If we score one, everyone would be talking about how well we did.

"We were one goal short of being really brilliant.

"The team is so young but it will come. We have to learn that last little bit of ruthlessness."



It wasn't as if Leicester did not have their chances – with close to 76 per cent possession and 24 shots in a one-sided match.

But two points out of nine tells its own sorry tale and the near 6,000 travellers demanded more.

Bobby Decordova-Reid missed a golden chance after nine minutes, fluffing his shot wide with only keeper Craig MacGillivray to beat.

Dons had only one real chance as Polish keeper Jakub Stolarczyk dashed out of his area but got nowhere near the ball and left an unguarded goal.

Fortunately for Martin – back at the club that gave him his first shot at management – they had no one in a position to cash in.

Jayden Joseph hit the bar in the second half and McGillivray pulled off two stops to deny Joseph and Sammy Braybrooke.

The result sees Dons preserve their unbeaten league record with a third draw in a row.

Gaffer Paul Warne admitted: "I leave with more good feelings than negative and that's pleasing.

"The lads were determined not to lose, we leave with a point, so happy days!"

DEAN'S BEELIEF

He eyes play-off push

By GEOFF KNOX

Barnet.....2
Cheltenham.....2

DEAN BRENNAN is making a beeline for the top seven after his Barnet side just missed out on the play-offs last term.

And the Bees chief was not Hive-talking after this thrilling draw kept Barnet up with the League Two pace-setters.

The Londoners recovered from a dreadful start to their first season back in the EFL and dropped just two points – to champions Bromley – in their final eight matches.

They fell short finishing in eighth but remain unbeaten this term after a real ding-dong with Cheltenham.

Brennan said: "What a brilliant match. They had a go, we had a go – I didn't want it to end.

"You're looking at honest lads – in both teams – who are giving everything for their families and representing their managers.

"We got 76 points last year. In 18 of the last 20 seasons that would've got you in the play-offs.

"This time last year I don't think we had any points."

Charlie Lakin scored just three league goals in 80 appearances for Walsall but has now netted three in three for new club Barnet.

He finished off a slick move to put the hosts ahead on 11 minutes.

The Robins were level on the hour when Ryan Broom punished woeful home defending.

Barnet shot themselves in the foot again four minutes later, Myles Kenlock's weak back-pass allowing Jake Evans to tee up Charlie McCann for Cheltenham's second.

But ref Abigail Byrne enraged the visitors by awarding a spot-kick after Broom felled Oisin Gallagher just inside the box.

Kabongo Tshimanga tucked the 78th-minute penalty away and the spoils were shared.

Town boss Steve Cotterill moaned: "We're allowed to say it was a very poor refereeing performance. I like Abi, for me it's not a penalty. It's not in the box. It's definitely not clear.

"I'm really happy with the boys but it could have been slightly better."

LEAGUE TWO

MERRY MILLER . . . Rotherham hero Mullin

Paul feels at home

By JON WEST

ROTHERHAM won at home for the first time since February thanks to Paul Mullin's maiden Millers goal.

Striker Mullin, signed from Wrexham, struck in the final minute to earn a 2-1 victory over CHESTERFIELD.

Fabio Tavares fired Rotherham ahead but Tom Bradshaw missed a penalty and Liam Mandeville levelled in the 88th minute.

Sub Mullin gave new boss Alex Bruce — son of Steve — his first victory.

Bruce said: "One-on-one with the keeper, you wouldn't want anybody else in that position. It was a great finish."

SALFORD'S sorry start to the season continued with a 1-0 loss at previously pointless SHREWSBURY.

It is three defeats in three for new boss Peter Cklamovski — they also lost to the Shrews in the Carabao Cup on penalties.

Will Boyle scored the only goal and Aussie Cklamovski said: "We've dug ourselves into a little hole."

Promoted ROCHDALE are also on zero points after sub Jaden Williams' late goal earned COLCHESTER a 1-0 win in Essex.

YORK are faring better on their Football League return — a 2-1 home victory against EXETER lifted them up to third.

RAVI'S ENGAGED!

As Priya turns to Jean after the bombshell paternity test results, Ravi encourages her to announce their engagement. After getting involved with the plans for Kim's wedding, Priya awkwardly ends up working on Cindy's event too. But that situation isn't why she comes over all queasy – she legs it from The Albert as she's got morning sickness. She runs into Penny, though, and ends up admitting she's pregnant. Of course, she swears Penny to secrecy, but that's now another person in the know. And in soapland, once those floodgates are open…

Soon, impressed with Ravi's progress, Priya decides it's time to share their marriage plans with Nugget and Avani. That's great news for Ravi, but it doesn't stop him pushing for the identity of Priya's lover, which kind of takes the shine off the moment. When Max later walks Priya home, Ravi spots what looks like a bond between them and everything falls into place – and it's not long before he finds a way to confirm his suspicions about Priya's boss. Later, when the local men gather for Max's stag night, the groom is missing. Is it payback time?

UNHAPPY FAMILIES

Most newcomers don't arrive in Walford with a man tied up in their car boot, and it's fair to say Nicola's recent surprise reunion with her sisters and mum wasn't a lovefest. While Nicola's shocked when her siblings Gemma and Jodie once again show up in the Square – along with Gemma's son Ryder – she lets them stay, on the condition that her mum Rose isn't going to join them. Which, of course, is the cue for Gemma's husband Ned and Rose to rock up. The Hawkins clan are here, but Nicola's not ready to play happy families, and she demands that Gemma and Ned make other plans. While Harry tells Jodie and Ryder that they can stay, he urges his mum to bury her beef with Rose.

Later, Ned goes to apologise to Kat about the commotion the Hawkins have caused, but he's delighted to see an old friend – Alfie. Nicola's thrown to then find her mob gathered in The Vic, where Alfie offers Ned and Gemma a bed. By the next morning, Kat makes it clear that it was a one-night-only agreement, while over at Peacock Palace, Linda and Elaine can't wait for Rose to pack her stuff and leave.

The gang then try to engineer a scheme to sort out Nicola and Rose's issues, but it totally backfires. Nevertheless, Nicola softens and tells Gemma and Ned that they can kip with her family for a short time, before finding out exactly what's brought the Hawkins clan to Walford…

My storyline with... Jamie Bamber (Ned Roper)

You're playing Nicola's brother-in-law Ned, part of the Hawkins family. Tell us about him.

Ned knows the impact he makes. He's someone who believes in discipline and in making the most of your own opportunities in life. But he is a failure when you first meet him. And yet he doesn't behave like a failure. They are essentially – this family – refugees from Essex. With nowhere to go… a hot mess of people whose lives are ruined. They have no home, their house is burnt down, and Walford is their first port of call.

Why is he so strong?

Ned knows nobody in this Square, but the thing he's got is his wit, his discipline. He's a former military man, from nothing, who worked his way up through the ranks. He's become a therapist – he retrained within the Army as a PTSD therapist. So he's someone who can talk, he's someone who can listen. He used to defuse bombs. So he stays calm in extraordinary, tense situations.

How has it felt joining EastEnders?

It's utterly unlike anything I've ever done before and I've been doing this for 30 years. I've got a mentor for the first time in my life, aged 53. And it happens to be Ian Beale [Adam Woodyatt]! I've been watching Ian on screen since I was 12. For my first take, Adam was off, he was on holiday. But he came in to watch my first scene. I was really humbled and touched by that .

"I've got a mentor for the first time in my life and he happens to be Ian Beale! I was really humbled"

Your credits include Battlestar Galactica and Law & Order: UK. Had you ever thought about doing a soap before?

No, this is not something that I ever thought would be on my radar. I've lived all over the globe and done things in different parts of the world. But I am a Londoner, and now I'm back in London. I watched the very first episode of EastEnders back in 1985, you know, when half the country were watching it. It's the only returning drama that I've ever watched as a fan. It's an experience I never thought I'd have, and here I am having it. And I thank my lucky stars.

EMMERDALE

MURDER MOST TORRID

Recent sad events are certainly keeping DS Ramsden busy, and she wastes no time in filling a shocked Serena in on her secret plan. However, the cop's not done with another case just yet, as the fallout from Dr Todd's murder just keeps getting messier and messier…

First, Charity's trying to make sure she and Sarah are on the same page when it comes to their lies about what happened, but she doesn't realise Sarah is spiralling. This isn't helped by Bear, who unknowingly puts Sarah's head into a further spin when he chats to her about how terrible Charity must be feeling knowing she killed Todd – obviously not aware the real culprit is looking him right in the eyes. Then, when Todd's funeral arrives, Sarah's guilt overwhelms her. Although Charity plans a happy family meal, DS Ramsden interrupts to tell her there are some big anomalies in her police statement about Todd...

Charity goes with the cops for further questioning, and as Sarah's worries go into overdrive, she's soon saying she wants to tell the police everything – leaving Serena concerned that she will end up getting locked up too…

KIMINAL RECORD?

Emmerdale fans were left in turmoil last week when Joe and Dawn's wedding ended in disaster and two tragic deaths. But while viewers are struggling to come to terms with the loss of Jimmy and Dawn, it's Joe who's struggling the most after watching his bride pass away from complications after giving birth to a baby boy. As he sinks further and further into his overwhelming grief, Kim and Graham watch on heartbroken and helpless. They're also understandably worried about the impact this will all have on Joe's newborn son.

But before they have time to put together a plan to help, DS Ramsden arrives with some shocking news – she's arresting Kim on suspicion of causing the crash that ultimately led to Dawn's death! Kim can't quite believe what she's hearing. But when she's in the police interview room opposite a very determined Ramsden, it becomes clear that there's even more to this story than we thought…

CORONATION STREET

WAKE-UP CALL

A confession from beyond the grave blows the Winter-Brown family to smithereens this week, as Celeste – Bernie's aunt and Todd's bestie – passes away and leaves her family to process a devastating secret… On Sunday, Todd and Gemma have a barney and he urges her to visit her dying aunt – at the Chariot Square, obviously – but their meeting is cut short when her health declines. Todd arrives and Gemma leaves, but he ends up having a bust-up with Celeste and storming off. Later, Gemma sees paramedics rushing to Celeste's hotel room and has to tell Bernie that her aunt has died, leaving behind a huge bombshell…

Meanwhile, Todd arrives to see Celeste and Ryan tells him that she's gone to a better place (no, not the Marriott). Gemma tells Kit about Celeste's secret, then Dev finds Bernie blubbing. The hidden truth is clearly distressing, and Gemma tells Bernie that she'll be by her side. As a sad Todd sorts through Celeste's belongings, he finds a note to say she wants them to have a party instead of the funeral. So they gather at the hotel bar and Todd reads out a letter from the deceased…

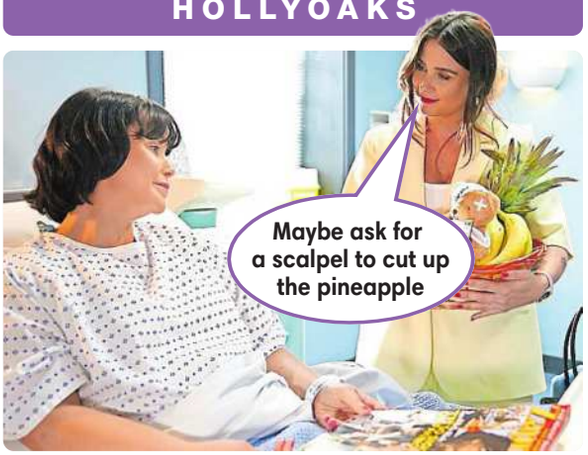
EIGHTIES THROWBACK

Debbie's dementia has a grip on her and this week it takes her back to a simpler time – the Eighties, when she was a hairdresser, which is unfortunate for Bethany, who ends up looking like the fourth member of Bananarama!

Ronnie's heart goes out to his wife when he sees she's wearing slippers for a supplier meeting and he guides her home. But his gentlemanly conduct takes a hit when he steals Idris' car for Fiona to even the score over the missing gun. Idris soon discovers Ronnie is the thief, and punches him (steady, Rocky!). Carl begs his stepdad not to go all out for revenge, because Debbie needs him to be calm.

Back in the salon, Bethany is too polite to put Debbie right about her nostalgic look, so Maria steps in. Later, Debbie finds Ronnie boozing in the bar and has a meltdown. Kevin and Abi then take Debbie to lunch to discuss her birthday plans, but Ronnie thinks it would be best if they keep the arrangements low-key… The hotel, anyone?

HOLLYOAKS



DREAD BASKET

Twisted teacher Abigail has firmly got inside Dee Dee's head, so much so that the confused teenager tried to kiss her apparent mentor last week. But as Dee Dee attempts to make sense of her actions, there's more drama at the school as Nancy suffers an MS relapse and needs medical attention. Dee Dee calls for help, and Abigail charges into action, but after saving Nancy, she suddenly turns frosty on her target – luckily, though, Maddox is on hand to support Dee Dee.

The next day, Nancy's pleased when Abigail shows up at the hospital with an impressive fruit basket, unaware that her newest recruit is trying to worm her way into her good books. Abigail then returns to the school, and Dee Dee is terrified when the teacher singles her out to read out a chapter of a book during an English class. However, Abigail's response to Dee Dee's efforts leaves the youngster even more unsure of herself, and it's clear that Abigail's grooming of her vulnerable student is only just beginning…

GOING, GOING... GONE MISSING

Ste and Leela are in over their heads with James' return, while Mercedes is unaware that she's on the wrong side of gangster Gemma. So when Mercy, Ste and Leela all go missing, could James or Gemma be responsible – or is there a more sinister force at play?

The week kicks off with Ste, er, kicking off at James after an ill-advised drink, and he publicly accuses him of killing Rex – but the lawyer's caring reaction to Ste's plight should arouse suspicion. Meanwhile, Gemma panics that the police are close to twigging she's the elusive crime boss they're seeking. She confesses her concern to Warren, but the moment is ruined by Xander (the son of Rex's apparent killer, Martin, remember?), who labels Gemma a murderer. Xander, by the way, is also best buddies with Lucas, who's released from prison this week.

Anyway, Gemma wants Warren all to herself, so she offers Mercedes a spa day – who then invites Ste and Leela to join her. Gemma asks her henchmen to follow them, and as Mercy and her two pals stop off at a service station, they suddenly disappear without a trace…

THE DANGER ZANE

Zane only showed up last week, but he's already gone missing. So when David arrives at Alf's place, wanting to get the paperwork signed off for Zane's new address, Alf lies that Zane's gone fishing, knowing Marilyn needs more time to find him. But poor Marilyn can't see anything that points to Zane's whereabouts in their letters, and starts to worry. That's until Mali spots Zane scavenging around for food in the bin, before he cuts himself jumping out of it. Luckily, with Mali's gentle persuasion, Zane ends up in the hospital, with Marilyn by his side. She makes him promise never to run away again, and says he can move in with her. What will Alf have to say about that?!

Well, the jury's definitely still out for Alf, but he's determined to keep a good eye on Marilyn – starting with ensuring she and Leah make up. Later, Zane and Leah bond over wanting the best for Marilyn, and Leah apologises to Marilyn and asks her to come back to work. Marilyn's answer? She'll return – but only if Zane can too!

BEAU AND AGGRO

Cash knows time is of the essence to get Beau locked up for the drugs drama he's brought to the Bay, but he can't pin down actual evidence. However, then Tane turns the case on its head, as he's seething with Beau for hurting Harper and goes for him, leading Cash to step in. Now, Cash is on a mission – to find Harper and get Beau locked up.

Luckily, Cash discovers Harper just in the nick of time, as she's frantically packing up her car. He assures Harper that she could help make Beau pay and says he can take pictures of her bruises as evidence. While it's touch-and-go, Harper eventually agrees and heads to the station with Cash. However, when Beau realises she's turned against him, he goes ballistic. But Beau can't hurt her, as, thanks to Cash's new evidence, David steps in to arrest him. Finally! However, just as Cash should be looking forward to celebrating his huge work win, he's then blindsided in a big way...
